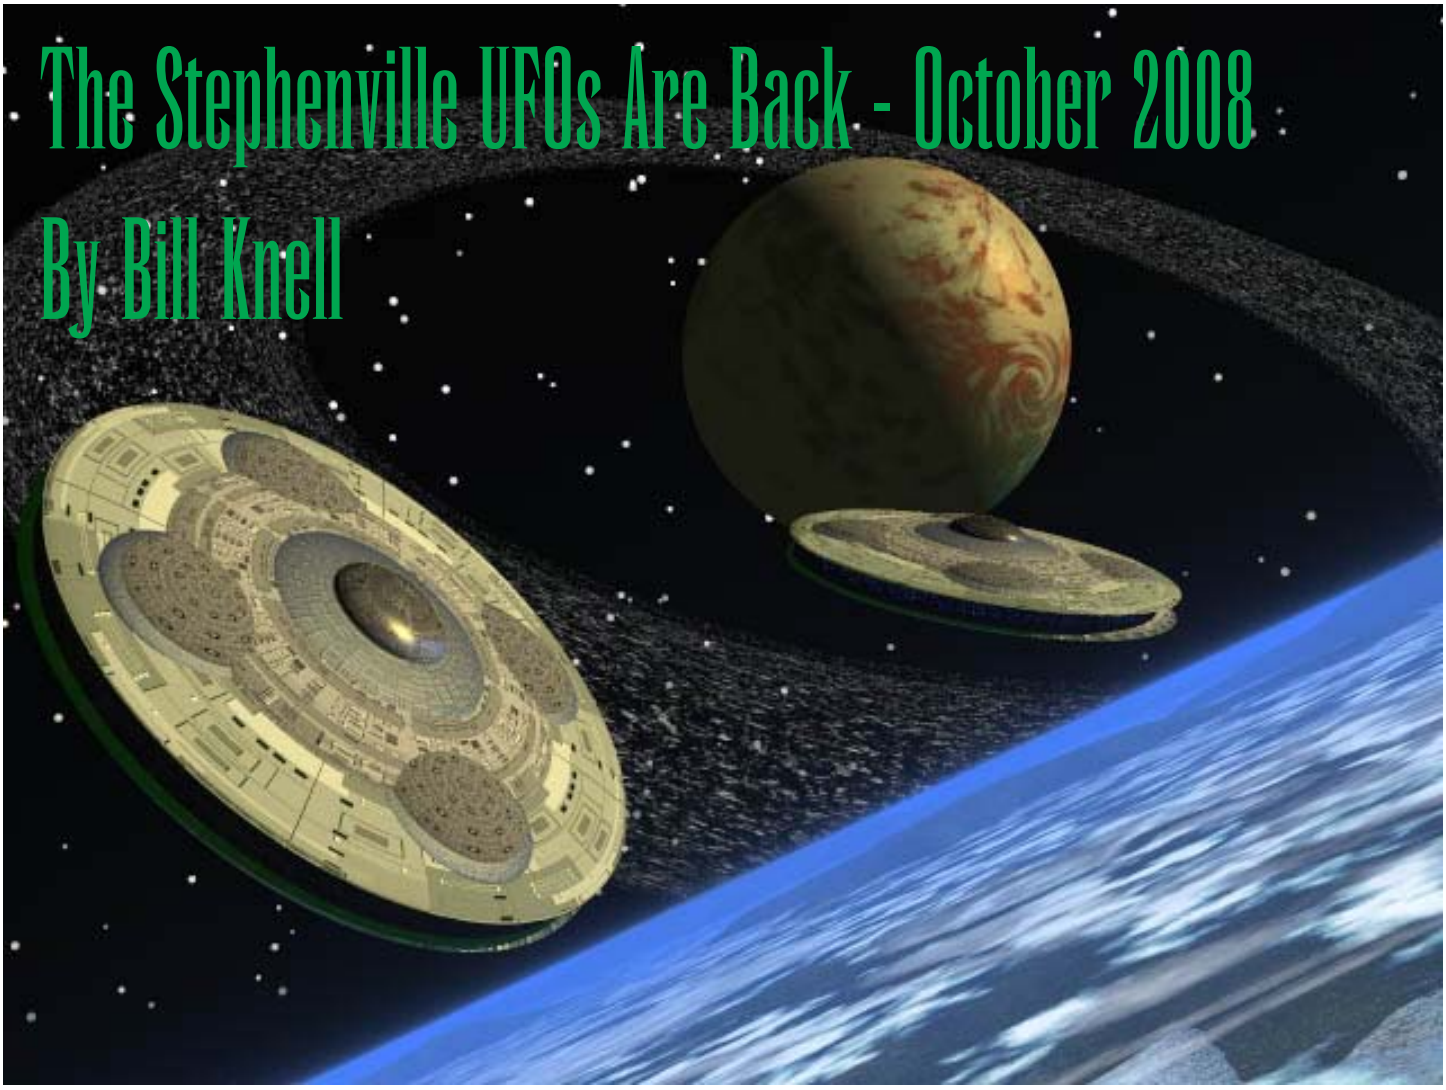
The Stephenville UFOs Are Back - October 2008

By Bill Knell



The Stephenville UFOs are back and so are the military jets that chase them. A number of unidenti fied lights were again seen in the skies over Erath County, Texas, beginning on October 21, 2008. The lights displayed various colors and moved rapidly in all directions over Stephenville for two nights in a row, but that was just the prelude to a much more exciting incident which occurred the next night in nearby Dublin, Texas.

On October 23, 2008, several teenagers and a few adults were at Dublin High School in the late evening when they saw an oval-shaped object with brilliant lights on it. Andy Monrreal used his mom's digital video camera to film the object for about a minute. Monrreal gave a description of the object to a news crew from News 8 (WFAA) in Dallas/Fort Worth. He said, ""You could see a shape. It was like a complete circle."

Monrreal's parents also saw the object and his father commented, ""I never seen nothing like that in my life… big lights and everything." His mother said, ""It was a round thing. You could see lights around it, flickering and changing. It was awesome. Just turning and flickering." A total of eleven witnesses reported seeing the same object and many confirm that military jets were in the area at the same time.

In what seems like a rerun of the original events that brought so much attention to Erath County back in January, the Joint Reserve Base in Fort Worth confirms that at least seven F-16s were training in the area at the time the object was observed. However, these training exercises were not announced in advance and the area where the UFO and the jets were seen is not airspace generally reserved for training.

Erath County, Texas, became known as a UFO hotspot during January of 2008 when one mass sighting and several subsequent incidents brought the area to the attention of the worldwide news media. Amid conflicting statements from local military authorities commenting on aerial training maneuvers and inept UFO research organization investigations, the sightings were blamed on everything from stars, moons and planets to flocks of birds, untrained observers, military exercises and misidentified aircrafts.

This object was filmed in Marble Falls, Texas, on 10/23/08 with a cell phone camera. Marble Falls is south of Dublin where an oval shaped object was filmed on the same night. Others have reported that several black helicopters began flying around the areas of Dublin and Stephenville, TX, on 10/24/08.

It wasn't until after I mentioned that a UFO flyover of the Bush Ranch in nearby Crawford, Texas, might have explained the large number of military jets observed in the skies over Erath County on January 8, 2008, that some investigators and reporters began to look at the Stephenville incidents more seriously. In fact, the Mutual UFO Network ultimately turned up evidence that radar reports indicated at least one of several objects seen over the Stephenville area on January 8, 2008, and being pursued by military jets was coming directly from the direction of the Bush Ranch.

The large oval object seen over Erath County on October 23, 2008 is similar to one observed on January 8, 2008, by several law enforcement officers in and around the Stephenville area. These officers were able to see more detail than most of the residents that just reported the lights at that time. The same object was later observed by Ricky Sorrells of Dublin who has been it several times since. He said that the thing hovered just three hundred feet above his head in a field behind his home and may have been the size of two or three football fields.

Sorrells' story became troubling as reports of harassment by military authorities surfaced. After reporting his sighting to a local news reporter, he claims that military jets and helicopters started flying at all hours over his property disturbing livestock and keeping him from getting a good night's sleep. Even worse, Sorrells' says that he has been directly and indirectly threatened to "keep your mouth shut about what you saw."

Although the national media is ignoring these latest rounds of UFO sightings and jet chases, the Stephenville story is one that will not just go away because reporters are busy with politics and economic issues. What they do not seem to understand is that this UFO flap and others currently going on all over the world will someday have a direct impact on those issues. If these sightings persist and the government finally runs out of excuses and their ability to

Spectacular UFO Encounters Have Occurred This Year and Continue To Happen

By Bill Knell

After a year of talk about unidentified aircraft crashes in Vietnam and the USA, record-setting crop circle appearances, and UFOs appearing over major cities and small rural areas to tens of thousands of witnesses worldwide, it should be no surprise that these sightings are continuing and growing in intensity. A good example is a recent series of encounters over Texas and Northern Indiana.

When the UFO sightings in Erath County, Texas, first gained national media exposure, I predicted that we had just seen the beginning of these events and time has proven me correct. Apart from the original and very public Stephenville and Dublin, Texas, sightings in January, many more have occurred since that time and UFOs have really begun to make a comeback in the area during the past two months.

A new series of UFO sightings began in Erath County in October of 2008. Several included good video and cell phone photos. These pale in comparison to an encounter which occurred on November 18, 2008. Michael Corn, 27, lives near Highway 377 Business and U.S. Highway 281. Some friends called him outside at around 7:15pmto witness something odd. The group saw a strange object in the southwest sky in the direction of Dublin, Texas, where a number of UFO sightings have occurred.

Corn, a former member of the U.S. Army assigned to a Patriot Missile Unit from 2003 to 2006, said that he and his friends saw a brightly lit, orange-colored, circular object that was hovering in the sky over Stephenville. He commented, "It looked really close to Stephenville like it was almost over the courthouse." Corn also said that the object had lights that appeared to pulse from right to left. According to Michael Corn, most anyone outside would have noticed the UFO.

"There is no way you could be outside and look up in the sky and not notice this thing," Michael said. "It was just weird." After watching it for about 15 seconds, Corn and his friends said that it disappeared without making any sounds. "It just vanished," he said. Convinced it was probably not some sort of experimental plane, misidentified aircraft or secret government project being tested in that area, Corn said, "It was very unnerving… you can't come up with a reasonable explanation for what it was."

Among the witnesses to this strange event was Ashley Couch, Michael Corn's girlfriend. When asked what she saw, Ashley commented, "It reminded me of a carousel lying over on its side… I don't think a quarter would have covered up the lights if I held one up viewing it from where I was. I think they were larger than that." Another observer that was not apart of the group outside Corn's home saw the object from the standpoint of the intersection of U.S. Hwy 281 and North Loop. She was traveling north in a car with her boyfriend when he noticed it.

"He asked me if I saw those weird lights," the female witness who wishes to remain anonymous said. "But, I hadn't noticed anything." While stopping to get gas at a Shell station near the intersection, another man asked them if they saw the strange lights. "He said he was a pilot and after my boyfriend had just asked me about the lights, so that got my attention," she said. After entering back into traffic on the loop, the couple had a clear view of the object.

The female witness described what she and her boyfriend saw: "It was coming down at a slight angle – slowly – it had a bright big light, a steady light and a blinking light for a total of three. One was red and maybe that was the one that was blinking…I'm not sure." Almost stopping in the middle of the road for a better look, the couple watched the UFO intently.

"It pivoted to our left side, maybe 50 yards away and 75 yards up in the air," she said. "It looked almost like it was hovering. The lights were so bright it was hard to see the shape, but the bottom looked a silver gray color." After finally continuing on and passing the object, the couple became curious about what the object might be. "We turned around and went back to the Shell station," the female witness said.

"There we saw it again, but this time it was on our right moving left across in front of us," she said. "It turned again and looked like it was about to stop and went back the other way. It went back in the direction from which it had come. It looked like if it were going to land it was going to land on the highway. The lights were so bright it was almost hard to look at it. I think it might have been blimp shaped and about the size of two school buses. It was hard to tell... These weren't some kind of flares, I've seen what they look like."

Whatever the couple saw, they were certain it wasn't something conventional or easy to identify. "When I think of something unidentified I don't think of little green men," she said indicating that it might have been some top secret test vehicle. "We were a little bit frightened," she continued. "Until you see something like that you don't really understand. I've made fun of people for seeing stuff like that and now I saw it."

After a number of calls came into local law enforcement, they commented that a few people said that military flares had been dropped in the Brownwood Military Operating Area (an area reserved for military aircraft training exercises) just prior to 7 p.m. However, the UFO sightings occurred after that and were not consistent with what most people would describe as flares.

It's also prudent to mention that a similar object described as a disc-shaped craft that remained stationary in the sky and had orange lights on it was seen on October 23, 2008, around eight o'clock by numerous witnesses during a junior varsity football game at Tiger Stadium in Hico, Texas. Sonny Morrow, a sophomore, was running the down marker chains on the visitor side of the field when he saw a large object in the sky beyond the stadium press box.

Sonny said it was too dark to notice much detail, but the thing had two rows of orange lights which appeared to be on a circular object which hovered above the area where the game was being played. "It was dark, but you could see three lights on one side and when they went around you could see the other three lights. It was spinning like a Frisbee," Morrow said. He watched the object for about seven or eight seconds, then it disappeared.

Elaborating on what he saw, Sonny said, "It was big and pretty far away. It wasn't hovering over the stadium or anything, it was pretty far back. This was about in the third quarter some time, because it was already dark. The referee saw it and asked, 'Did you see that?' Then the ref asked, 'Did you see that last play?' because we were watching the UFO. They blew the whistle and I had to change the down marker, and when I looked back up it was gone. But a minute or two later it showed up again for a few seconds, then it just disappeared, like it had turned the lights off."

After several photos and some video taken of the UFO during the game ran on a Ft Worth TV News broadcast, Air Force officials from the Naval Air Station Joint Reserve Base in Fort Worth said they had seven F-16s from the 457th fighter squadron in the Brownwood area for training operations on that night between nine and ten o'clock. The inference was that what people were seeing was jets, but there is no way that the presence of military aircraft could account for the UFO sighting. If the jets were there, it was to chase the UFO and some who saw the object come in from further south say that's exactly what happened.

D'Ann Wheeler was one of the witnesses who saw the UFO and military jets around the same time as those watching the game at Tiger Stadium. Her sighting occurred two and a half miles south of Hico, just off Highway. 281. She was looking towards the northwest when she saw the UFO between 9 p.m. and 10 p.m. Wheeler said, "There were two humongous sets of lights, bright orange. Two sets of lights, vertical like. I mean if you'd put a bar between them it would look like an H. They stayed in one spot. First, I saw six or seven jets, flying in formation. But this thing with two sets of lights was so much larger than any of those aircraft. Then all of a sudden, it just vanished, and all of these jets congregated over in one area."

D'Ann described what happened next: "After about 10 minutes, the lights came back on and the jets scrambled back to that site. I watched it for a least minute both times. The lights didn't fly off. They just disappeared… They weren't anything like military flares like some people are saying. I've seen those and these were different." A friend that was traveling with her also saw what happened, as did several other witnesses in the area. All were convinced that the jets were attempting to follow or intercept the UFO.

As if all this weren't enough, similar incidents seem to be occurring again in the area of Northern Indiana where UFOs were seen this past year. The earlier sightings involved loud noises, mysterious falling debris, a possible earth tremor and military jets chases. The latest encounters occurred just a week ago. Beth and Gary of Kokomo, Indiana, sent this account to me:

"My fiancé and I were driving southbound on 31 South about 6:30 PM on Sunday, November 16, 2008. We noticed a very bright light in the southern sky, about 5 miles in front of us. At first, we thought it was a helicopter hovering in the sky, but as we went further south, we noticed that we were getting closer to the object, and that it was NOT a helicopter. It was very bright, and there was no sound coming from it."

"As we approached the light at 31 South and 26 East (400 South), a second light appeared just to the left of the first one. We turned the corner, and got to our driveway, about 2 miles away from lights. The first light disappeared when we exited our vehicle. We noticed a third light that appeared just left of the second one. The lights remained in the sky, fading dim to bright, for about 15 minutes."

"There were no stars in the sky, because of the clouds, but the clouds had no effect on the lights, as they were behind the objects. Sometimes, when the lights became very bright, I could also see red and blue (or greenish) lights flashing on the objects. After about fifteen minutes of watching this event, they just vanished. We have seen this event many times before from our back yard."

"We know these are not Air Force flares, because usually the night after we witness these events, we see the jets shooting off flares in about the same location as the sightings. There is no chance we are mistaking these objects for flares. Flares do not sit still for 15 minutes fading to dim then getting VERY bright again."

With similar sightings occurring regularly in the UK, Europe and other parts of the world, UFOs are again proving that they are a global phenomenon. It's unlikely that so many similar events could happen in so many places and end up being merely misidentified aircraft, military exercises or the testing of some super-secret aerial device. In fact, UFOs have exhibited the same behaviors on a global scale for as long as people have kept records of such things.

Unexplained Lights filmed over Erath County, Texas, on November 13, 2008 influence what the media says about them, that day may not be long in coming.

October and November
UFO Sightings in Stephenville, Texas

On November 13, 2008, several photos were taken in the Stephenville, Texas, area that are reminiscent of the video and photos previously photographed in the skies over Erath County. The photos were taken at night and show fast moving lights creating a zigzag effect on film. These photos are just the tip of the ice berg when I comes to new UFO activity in the Stephenville area.

Although many would correctly argue that the UFO activity in Erath County, Texas, has never really ceased since the January 2008 sightings that brought so much attention to the area, UFO sightings have certainly been on the rise over the past several weeks. Things began to heat up on October 21, 2008, when local residents in Stephenville and Dublin, Texas, reported seeing lights and discs in the air at night and during the day.

On October 23, 2008, several teenagers and a few adults were at Dublin High School in the late evening when they saw an oval-shaped object with brilliant lights on it. Andy Monrreal used his mom's digital video camera to film the object for about a minute. Monrreal gave a description of the object to a news crew from News 8 (WFAA) in Dallas/Fort Worth. He said, ""You could see a shape. It was like a complete circle."

Those sightings were followed up by reports of military jet activity in the area and the arrival of a number of government helicopters. According to local residents that have sent me emails and reported these events to television news reporters in the Fort Worth area, odd lights have been seen all over Erath County and beyond. Many of the sightings were accompanied by the sudden appearance of unmarked helicopters that appear to be government or military aircrafts.

Steven C., a truck driver that frequently hauls freight between Dallas/Ft Worth and areas to the north and south of there, contacted me by email to report his sighting. He wrote that sometime around ten o'clock on the evening of November 14, 2008 he saw what he described as "a blue and green circle of lights" hovering above a state highway just west of Dublin, Texas.

C. wrote, "The lights sparkled and looked like a huge ring sitting about a hundred feet above the road… I watched them for maybe ten minutes before they vanished… They were gone! I didn't see them after that… I drove another ten miles and saw two big military helicopters flying low to the east… They kept pace with me for a while… I looked again after a few minutes and they were gone."

The national news media is ignoring most of the new reports involving UFOs coming out of Erath County. It may be that they still accept the 'training exercises' excuse the military has been offering since the January 2008 sightings occurred and assume that most of the lights are just misidentified aircrafts. The other possibility is that they simply don't want to deal with the fact that Aliens from other worlds may actually exist and be visiting ours.

Ufos in one form or another have been reported as far back as Biblical times, but in the 1880s there were scattered reports of ufos resembling airships, accompanied by speculation about Martians or other extraterrestrials visiting Earth, and speculation about human inventors developing airships, as in Jules Verne's "Robur the Conqueror." Sacramento, California researcher Frank Warren has published a 6/7/1884 Nebraska newspaper story about a rancher who claimed he saw a flaming airship crash...but no wreckage has ever been produced. In 7/1887 in Georgia the "Quincy Daily Whig" reported the crash of a fiery "meteor" that turned out to be a blue metallic sphere with some kind of writing and pictures on it. The sphere, if it ever existed, vanished from history.

But it was on 11/17/1896 that the famous wave of airship sightings began. One George Scott, assistant to the Secretary of State, and several other people reported seeing from the deck by the Capitol dome a light shining down from the sky. Some of the witnesses reported three lights, and most of them thought they saw a long, dark shape behind the lights. Also in Sacramento, one RL Lowery claimed he saw an airship with side wheels being pedaled (?) by two men and heard a voice saying "Throw her up higher; she'll hit the steeple." It is probable that many of the reports were hoaxes; also, it has long been noted by some researchers that ufos usually appear to represent a technology just a little ahead of the time, which might indicate hoaxes or perhaps some kind of mind game being played on us by the ufo entities. Later the airship was seen over the Cliff House in San Francisco, where its searchlights reportedly frightened the seals in the surf below the cliff.

From there, airship reports spread all across the US in the following months. There were many sightings in Chicago. There were many reports of fully human occupants landing and asking for water. One of these, in Beaumont, Texas, gave his name as "Wilson", and claimed that the craft had been constructed in Iowa and that it had electric motors. In Uvalde, Texas, an occupant calling himself "Wilson" claimed to be from Goshen, New York. In Kuntze, Texas the occupants gave their names as "Wilson" and "Jackson." A Mr. Akers wrote a letter to the "Galveston Daily News" saying that he knew an airship inventor named "Wilson" from the State of New York. Peter Moon, an author who has written about mysterious events in Montauk, Long Island, claims he keeps encountering the name "Wilson" in his investigations. This may or may not be significant.

In the US, prior to the sightings wave, a number of inventors had taken out patents on airships, but none ever flew, and they were designed as powered lighter than air craft, unlikely to be able to perform reliably (even if one or more had been constructed) and fly all over the country, only to vanish as abruptly as they had appeared and never be heard from again.

But could human inventors have designed and built craft of a more advanced nature, perhaps using some form of gravity control? It seems unlikely, but the idea cannot simply be dismissed. We still do not fully understand how ancient people quarried, shaped, transported, and emplaced the immense megaliths found in such places as Sacsahuaman and Baalbek. The ancients certainly knew more about acoustics and magnetism than they are generally credited with knowing. At Tiahuanaco my guide spoke to me in a normal voice when he was perhaps a hundred yards away, but the acoustics of the structure we were in allowed me to hear him easily. At Macchu Picchu I hummed into a trapezoidal niche in a stone wall and the entire structure resonated. On a small, flat topped pyramid in Tiahuanaco I saw a row of black stone monoliths bearing an eery resemblance to the one in the film"2001" and the one in the UN meditation room. Using an ordinary magnetic compass I found that the stones were highly magnetized, with one end a north pole and the other a south pole.

Researcher and writer Christopher Dunn, investigating the Great Pyramid at Giza, says that the King's Chamber emits (at a very low intensity) the chord F sharp, and suggests that this is the harmonic of our entire planet and is focused by the pyramid. Striking the coffer in the King's chamber causes it to emit the note A at about 440 cycles per second, causing the entire chamber to resonate. There have been several unverified reports of sonic levitation being achieved by Tibetan monks. A Swedish man called "Dr. Jarl" claimed he saw the monks levitate a heavy stone using carefully arranged trumpets and drums, and a similar report was made by an Austrian film maker named Linauer. These reports date from the nineteen twenties and nineteen thirties and are a little short on specifics. But could sound cause true levitation? Conventional physics says no, but it is no secret that there are beginning to be serious problems with conventional physics. If there were, after all, a luminiferous aether, and it was composed of a dense network of longditudinal waves traveling in a medium consisting of a matrix of waves (yes, you read that right, a seeming paradox) gravity might be a result of these waves pushing matter, and an object vibrating at the right frequency might conceivably harness this energy. But could a nineteenth century inventor have discovered how to do this, or learned of it from some ancient texts?

"Dr. Jarl" claimed he saw the monks levitate a heavy stone using carefully arranged trumpets and drums

The controversial American inventor John Ernst Worrell Keely (9/3/1827-11/18/1898) has a cult following second only to that of Nicola Tesla, and many of his disciples believe that he achieved gravity control and harnessed "free" energy. Keely had a laboratory in Philadelphia, where he experimented with "sympathetic vibratory physics." There have been rumors that he acieved sonoluminescence and made an acoustic refrigerator. He said that he could disintegrate the water molecule with sound waves at 620, 630, or 12,000 cycles per second. Supposedly over twenty witnesses saw him levitate a one ton steam engine. Reportedly, he attached himself to his machines with wires and appeared to concentrate; if so, this hints at some kind of psychokinetic effect, which may explain why others were unable to duplicate his work.

When he died a Boston businessman bought his equipment, and, unable to make it work, pronounced it fraudulent. A team from "Scientific American" claimed to have found tanks and pipes in his basement, and claimed that he had defrauded all of his investors and simply ran his machines with compressed air. His followers claim that the pipes were too small to have produced the effects that so many witnessed.

And some claim that he may very well have been the inventor of the 1896-1897 airship. I must stress the fact that this is only speculation. Ultimately, we don't know if Keely was a fraud or if he had actually discovered how to tap aetheric energy. Even if he did, we don't know if he invented the famous airship. But something was flying over the US for several months; even though some of the confused and contradictory reports were probably fraudulent it is unlikely that all of them were. And so the mystery continues.

Lunar Anomolies

This film reveals the strange structures on the surface of the moon after the colorization process was applied to the black and white photos. Once Jose Escamilla colorized the photos, these strange towers, buildings, and UFOs suddenly revealed themselves. Anyone can now see what is on the moon with the naked eye.

Jose Escamilla used earth colors and tones and applied them to the moon's surface. The results are striking and many are shocking to know there may be a moon teeming with life.

RAF pilots have tried to BLAST UFOs out of the sky

THE Sun

By CHARLOTTE SPRATT
and GARY O'SHEA

Published: 26 Jan 2009

Nick Pope

RAF pilots have tried to BLAST UFOs out of the sky under a top secret Government directive, it was claimed last night.

Nick Pope — who worked on the Ministry of Defence's UFO desk for three years — revealed the rules of engagement for the first time.

He claimed RAF pilots had fired at UFOs on several occasions — but failed to bring them down.

He added: "We know of cases where the order has been given to shoot down — with little effect to the UFO."

Mr Pope said the rules of engagement were drawn up after dozens of close encounters with suspect craft in British airspace.

RAF attacks on UFOs were "not automatic but happen when something in our airspace is deemed to be a threat".

He explained: "In the case of UFOs, whether the object is causing a threat is very much a (pilot's) judgment call."

Mr Pope, 43, from London, said the "shoot down" orders had been issued under the highly-classified directive since the beginning of the 1980s.

He believes a pattern has emerged in incidents already publicised in this country and abroad.

When a UFO is thought to be threatening a country's airspace, the drastic action has been taken.

He said: "There was a faction in the MoD who said 'We want to shoot down a UFO and that will resolve the issue one way or another'."

He claimed credible UFO witness statements had come from dozens of near-misses with planes, police helicopters and RAF jets in recent years.

Locals saw "strange lights" streaking towards the 290ft-tall power generator.

But any alien battles with the RAF will be kept secret, according to Mr Pope, who worked as a civil servant at the MoD for 21 years.

He said: "The public won't know unless it comes down in a heavily-populated area."

He added: "I do believe we will bring one down. We're developing increasingly sophisticated weapons."

Mr Pope also rubbished the MoD's stance that UFOs pose no danger to the public, saying: "I think that's a line I wrote myself in the 1990s.

"But if they haven't investigated, how do they know it poses no threat?

"They will try to play it down by talking about flying saucers and little green men. But there are MPs and ministers and a faction of the MoD who do believe in UFOs."

An MoD spokesman last night refused to comment on the directive.

OBAMA
AND UFOs

President Obama appears to have very little interest in UFOs or outer space. During a news flap over statements made by Shirley MacLaine last year about a UFO sighting that former Presidential Candidate Dennis Kucinich had, a number of other Democratic Candidates were asked how they felt about UFOs. Barack Obama told the late Tim Russert of NBC News that he was more concerned about improving the quality of people's lives here on Earth, than space aliens.

Obviously preferring to focus his attention on solving the terrestrial economic problems of U.S. Citizens, Barack Obama has also sent strong signals to NASA that he has little interest in spending billions of tax dollars on space exploration. He stood with Florida Senator and former Astronaut Bill Nelson at the Kennedy Space Center this past summer to declare that although he would support continued "basic research and development" at NASA over the long term, he would need to find ways to pay for it that would not take money away from programs that help people here on Earth in the short term.

Obama and many other democrats believe that promises made by President Bush regarding future NASA programs involving the Moon and Mars have always been strong on rhetoric and short on funding. Unlike the funded mandate outlined in his famous "We shall go to the Moon…" speech that the late President John F. Kennedy delivered to NASA's doorstep, the most that Bush and the various incarnations of the U.S. Congress that have existed during his Administration have done is sent the space agency a few dollars to develop vehicles needed to get to those places.

Apart from the fact that big money for space programs has been a hard sell even during the best of economic times in recent years, it's doubtful that President Elect Obama will be motivated to do much more than just keep the lights on at NASA and allow current plans for the International Space Station to go forward as long as they don't require too much funding. The real question is what will happen after he is sworn in as the forty-forth President of the United States.

I don't imagine that there were too many Champaign corks popping at the Pentagon after Obama won the 2008 U.S. Presidential Election. President Elect Obama is known to prefer diplomacy to military solutions. Whether he will go as far as former President Jimmy Carter did by trying to dismantle the CIA and cut military spending by billions when he got into office remains to be seen. What does seem to be certain is that not all U.S. Presidents receive the real E.T. briefing. Carter tried to get it from former CIA Director George H. Bush before he replaced Bush with a new director, but was turned down.

Times have changed and it's entirely possible that Obama will receive a briefing about UFOs and Aliens whether anyone in the military or intelligence gathering community wants him to have it or not. Given the number of UFOs seen worldwide over the past few years and the obvious military responses in the form of jet and helicopter chases, Obama may have to simply join a show already in progress. If that happens, look for the tell-tale changes in Obama's attitude towards UFOs, Aliens or Space Programs. A sudden and unexpected dependency on the military, a lack of interest in cutting their budget and overall adjustment of his political views may be one sign, but probably not the biggest.

I would expect a world-minded politician like Barack Obama to support UFO disclosure given the diplomatic and international relations possibilities such a move would offer our nation. Especially if he was convinced that extraterrestrials were really visiting our planet and impacting worldwide economies and technologies. Knowing that he could not affect change overnight, Obama might consider supporting disclosure with the hope that he could force the ultimate unveiling of alternative energy sources and new energy efficient technologies that have may have been developed as a result of captured or bartered UFO technology.

Several staff members working for movers and shakers in the Democratic Party have already claimed that some sort of 'summit' took place shortly after the Dennis Kucinich UFO affair last year to discuss how the Party faithful would react to UFO incidents in the future. However, most of these Party players probably do not have the clout needed to find out what's really happening with ET's and our government. Their responses would merely offer preplanned, politically correct lip service to the subject and Obama doesn't seem to be interested in that.

As President, Barack Obama's disinterest in UFOs may serve him better than Bill Clinton's interest in the subject. Bill and Hilary went out of their way to dig up information about extraterrestrials and the government during their time in the White House. The result was lackluster at best. Military members sent them self-serving reports and briefing statements indicating that there was nothing to the Roswell UFO incident and political cronies were stonewalled at every turn as their tried to unravel the UFO mystery from inside the Oval Office.

I think it's possible that some UFO insiders in the government may look at President Elect Obama as a sort of 'clean slate' type of politician given his statements about change. At best, they will trust him with the UFO secret and look for him to promote disclosure and provide positive leadership in that direction. At worst, they'll tell him their own version of the E.T. story and use his ability to sway public opinion to maintain control over all things extraterrestrial.

UFO over Obama Inauguration?

Monday January 26, 2009

The latest hot topic on the Net has been a video clip of Obama's inauguration from CNN that appears to show an unknown flying object moving behind the Washington Monument from right to left at a high rate of speed.

The video was taken just after Obama's inauguration speech, as Wolf Blitzer and Anderson Cooper were commenting. There have been many varied explanations for the object, with everything from a bird to a plane being offered as answers.

Keep in mind that there were no planes allowed in the area during the inauguration.

FASTWALKERS Open Files: A Series You Must See

A Review by Bill Knell

Anyone that saw FASTWALKERS They Are Here, a motion picture directed by Anthony Miles, has to see a new project entitled FASTWALKERS Open Files. Like most people that put together a film project these days, Miles and the others responsible for FASTWALKERS were limited by time constraints. That meant that anyone watching the film was only able to see a small portion of the amazing interviews filmed for the movie. Miles has remedied that by releasing many of the interviews he filmed for FASTWALKERS in this new series.

With over 50 interviews that run about an hour each to work with, the FASTWALKERS Open Files series will surely end up as a video encyclopedia of modern UFO experts, witnesses, sightings, encounters and cover-ups. This isn't just general information that most people with access to cable TV or the internet already know or can get, it's insider information that allows the viewer to see, hear and experience exclusive facts and stories, first hand, from the experts and witnesses that provide it.

It's important to understand that this is uncensored information collected during exclusive interviews. After watching the first two volumes of this series which include a total of six interviews, I can honestly say that the information provided equals and surpasses what most people will see and hear if they attend any one of several UFO conferences held each year by even the most credible organizations. And there is so much more to come in future volumes.

If quality counts, the production values of this series equal that of the original FASTWALKER movie. It is visually stunning and content rich. More importantly, the people being interviewed are placed at ease so that they can concentrate on the subject at hand instead of being distracted by amateur camera operators or faulty equipment malfunctions.

The inclusion of expert researchers, authors and lecturers in each volume makes this series even more important. The line up of people that have been interviewed by the FASTWALKERS crew is amazing indeed and I can't wait for all of the volumes to be released. If the first two that I have watched are any sign of things to come, this series is a must-have for anyone interested in UFOs, extraterrestrial life forms, government cover-ups or disclosure.

I decided to watch the Open Files interview with Dr. Steven Greer first. Ever since he created the Disclosure Project, Greer has been at the forefront of researching the cover-up of UFO information by governments around the world. By openly inviting former military and government employees that have information about the UFO cover-up to contact him, he has helped blow the lid of secrecy off a number of previous secret encounters involving UFOs. Greer openly discusses these kinds of things in the interview and shares his own beliefs about the origin of UFOs and extraterrestrials visiting our planet.

I found the Open Files interview with Graham Bethune particularly fascinating. Bethune is a former Navy Pilot that had an encounter with a huge UFO. More importantly, he discusses what he says the late President Eisenhower knew about extraterrestrials. Graham presents evidence in the form of photos, illustrations and his own recollections that clearly show that Eisenhower and members of the U.S. Military knew that UFOs were intelligently controlled vehicles of extraterrestrial origin.

Fans of Dr. Leonard Horowitz with also enjoy this set. Dr. Horowitz is a speaker, author, researcher and health advocate. He has discovered the secrets of the global industrial complex and exposed the lies and misrepresentations of big drug companies that care more about making money than making people better. His interview is revealing and allows viewers access to a wealth of information they might not otherwise come across.

The fact that this set includes an interview with Jim Marrs gives it all the credibility in the world. Marrs is an author, researcher, speaker and reporter. Previously best known for his investigation of the JFK Assassination, government projects involving remote viewing and other eclectic subjects, his 1997 book Alien Agenda woke up a lot of people and made them face the fact that our world is being visited by extraterrestrials. His Open Files interview is one of the most thought provoking I've seen so far.

The inclusion of an interview with Alfred Lambremont Webre is a master stroke for the series. Webre is a futurist and considered to be the founding father of Exopolitics. His theory that our planet has been quarantined by other living beings in the universe is certainly food for thought. Webre believes that we exist in a social bubble because we refuse to seek spiritual evolution and, instead, have settled for a course which will lead to global self-destruction. His Open Files interview is insightful and thought provoking to say the least.

I was thrilled to see that Jerry Pippin, a noted syndicated radio personality, was also included in the set. Pippin has interviewed more UFO researchers and investigators than most in his field. He's also been on the spot at many UFO conferences and events throughout the years. This has allowed him direct, in-person access to experts and witnesses that might not otherwise have been available for those kinds of 'in your face' interviews.

Those experts make up the gist of the first two volumes. Each volume is fairly priced and rewards the viewer with ample material and the time to enjoy it. FASTWALKERS Open Files is a legitimate and necessary resource for UFO and paranormal researchers, as well as anyone that wants to know more about the world of the unexplained as it relates to UFOs and Aliens. I recommend this series and look forward to its continuing development through the release of future volumes.

The Slovenia UFO Incidents and NATO Military Response

By Bill Knell

According to a recent Slovenia news broadcast, one or more UFOs appeared over Ajdovščèina, a town of about seven thousand people in the Vipava Valley that's about thirteen miles from the Italian border. A video exists which appears to show a large, disc-shaped UFO that allegedly appeared just after six o'clock on the evening of October 14, 2008. The video shows the object hovering over Ajdovščèina.

People in Ajdovščèina, Ozeljan and Shempas all reported strange phenomena in conjunction with UFO sightings on October 14, 2008. The phenomena included cell phone and electrical outages, and loud noises that sounded like artillery fire. A Russian newspaper reported that a UFO was seen above the Krško Nuclear Power Plant in Krško, Slovenia, on several occasions between October 13 and October 16, 2008. This might explain the roughly five minute power outages that occurred in the Slovenian capital of Ljubljana and other cities and towns throughout the country during the UFO sightings.

A military aircraft appears briefly in the video of the UFO that appeared over Ajdovščèina. It was probably dispatched from Aviano Air Force Base, a NATO facility located in northeastern Italy. Slovenia has been a member of NATO since 2004. It would be unlikely to restrict U.S. or NATO Forces from conducting operations against anything in their skies that might interfere with the operation of their nuclear power plant or pose a potential threat to their nation.

Eyewitnesses in nearby Serbia also reported UFOs and other strange phenomena during the past several weeks. Along with brief power outages, they reported a loud noise which sounded like an explosion, minor earth tremors and an unseen destructive force that leveled several buildings, ruined a few houses and destroyed corn fields. Loud noises, brief power and cell phone outages, and minor earth tremors were reported in various locations scattered throughout the USA earlier this year in conjunction with UFO sightings.

A male passenger that was aboard an Adria Airlines flight headed to Ljubljana on October 12, 2008, sent me an email about a UFO sighting he had. He is an American currently working in Slovenia:

"We were getting ready to land in Ljubljana around 1430 hours when the aircraft started shaking briefly. There were not more than fifty people aboard and we're all used to the kind of turbulence that you get flying over Slovenia. This was different. It put us all on edge. Some of the passengers on the port side started yelling. Every looked out the windows and saw a glowing light that kept changing colors. It sparkled purple, red, green, blue. The light was oblong and kept flipping over. After a minute it blinked out and was gone. We tried taking cell pics of it. They didn't show anything."

The passenger said that he and the other passengers saw several aircraft near the UFO, but told me that they did not appear to be military. None of the cell phone photos that were taken actually showed anything. The flight crew never said anything about the UFO and no one from his flight talked about it after the plane landed. He did hear several people in the airport saying that they saw a UFO during another flight, but he was afraid to ask them about it. There were more armed security officers roaming the airport that evening than he was used to and that made him cautious.

This latest round of UFO incidents is typical of the flap that has occurred over the past year. The fact that NATO jets may have been involved is no surprise either. U.S. and NATO Air Forces have been increasingly active in chasing UFOs, despite excuses and claims to the contrary. Eyewitness and photographic evidence shows that as recently as February 22, 2008, a military helicopter was involved in a low altitude chase of three luminous balls of light just a few miles from Cervia Air Base in Italy.

More troubling than the fact that NATO military aircrafts are regularly involved in the attempted interception of UFOs is the fact that such unannounced and secretive actions put nations and individuals at risk. During the past few weeks Russian Forces have been on some sort of high alert status. That fact was announced by several cable news channels, as well as the news broadcasts offered by the major broadcast networks. Why? The answer may be that while NATO is busy chasing UFOs around the skies of the world, the Russians are interpreting these actions as provocative and taking precautionary actions of their own.

Skeptics and their cohorts continue to applaud the denials of powerful governments throughout the world which proclaim that incidents involving military forces and extraterrestrials are merely folklore or a misinterpretation of training exercises, but that doesn't mean they do not occur. The TRUTH isn't just OUT THERE, it's RIGHT HERE and the sooner that some people face it, the better!

SECRET STORIES FROM A UFOLOGIST

Here's an excerpt from the new book UFO GUY by Bill Knell

Chapter One

The Firemen, The Pool,

The Pilots and The Saucer Nests

The best way for you to understand the amazing things that I have experienced and investigated is for me to begin at the beginning. I was born in Queens, New York City during the mid-1950s. By that time, my parents were already living on Long Island. They bought a brand new two story house in the village of East Meadow. It was a quiet place with a few apple orchards and lots of open spaces. Before I came along, my mother lost her first child. My sister Cheryl died just after she was born.

Although she worked as an Officer Manager at that time, the loss of her child caused my mother to make a decision to become a nurse. She always felt that her child was lost because the nurses caring for her missed something and didn't listen to what she or her doctor said. To that end, she began training as a Nurse's Aide at Meadowbrook Hospital. She worked there as an Aide for a couple of years and, eventually, graduated first in her class at the Queens College School of Nursing.

After my sister's death, my mother was told that having any more children was out of the question. As a prospective nurse, she wasn't about to let the world of medicine give up on her. After visiting a number of doctors that told her the same sad tale, my father stepped in. He had a good friend that was a doctor. They met in the military and his specialty happened to be obstetrics. I called him Uncle Stanley.

Stanley was brilliant and came along just in time for the baby boom of the 1950s. He knew that a lot of women that wanted to have children during that time, but couldn't do so for a number of medical reasons. Like my mother, Stanley hated the idea that the medical science couldn't help. He went to work designing special surgical procedures and tools to correct some of those problems and my mother was his first test case.

After becoming a partner in a private Doctor's Hospital in Fresh Meadows, New York City, he performed several operations on my mother. She became pregnant and gave birth to me at that hospital in 1956. It wasn't an easy birth and my health was in question for the first several months of my life. However, things worked out and Stanley became part of our family. He stopped by on holidays and special occasions and was always welcome. My mother never failed to remind me how miraculous it was that I was conceived and born.

I grew up on Long Island. I don't remember much about my early days there in the late 1950s because I was just too young. Fortunately (or unfortunately), my parents became infatuated with the Kodak 8mm camera and took lots of film of me as a toddler. I can't tell you how many times I was forced to sit through hours of watching myself waddle around on our home movie screen. However, there was a side benefit.

We owned an 8mm camera and movie screen, but not the projector. My parents were brought up in the depression era, so the idea of owning something expensive like that was out of the question. Whenever they decided to show their 8mm movies to friends and relatives, they rented a projector from a nearby pharmacy for a couple of bucks a night. The rental was a three day minimum, so after they finished with it, it was my turn.

We had a finished attic. One side of it was a guest bedroom where various relatives stayed when they visited, and the other was my secret sanctum. It was an activity room where my friends and I went to play. When I got hold of the rented projector, the attic became my own private movie theater. I invited my friends over to watch old horror and sci-fi flicks.

The 8mm movies were reels that ran about three to fifteen minutes. Some were rentals or library films, while others were bought for my by my parents. They were the best scenes from old films of the 1940s and 1950s. It wasn't a VCR and there was no sound, but for us it was great! After seeing those old films on the small TV screen, it was awesome to watch them on a home movie screen (even if it was only five feet high).

Our two story house was located on Devon Street in East Meadow. It sat on the corner lot directly across from the water department facility where a gigantic water tower stood. The water department property was surrounded by a huge number of trees and gave the impression that the area was more rural than it was suburban. Meadow Lawn Elementary School was cattycorner to our lot. Today, it's called McVey Elementary.

By the time I started school in the early 1960s, the apple orchards and open spaces that once defined East Meadow were almost all gone. A few farmers hung on to their property, but the village was quickly becoming a substantial bedroom community with lots of houses, stores, a few schools, offices and businesses. As far as mass transit went, we were a good distance from it. The nearest train station for the Long Island Railroad was in Westbury, about ten minutes away by car.

The good news was that we were in walking distance of a delicatessen, pizzeria, IGA supermarket, candy store, luncheonette, dry cleaners, bowling alley, post office, public library, barber shop, beauty salon, firehouse and more as time went on. I especially loved visiting the firehouse. I stopped by there anytime that I went to the public library next store.

My father was always very civic-minded. He cared about our town and did everything he could to support the local infrastructure, which included our volunteer fire department. He gave generously to them when they asked for donations and my mother baked more than a few cakes and cookies for their ladies auxiliary bake sales. That was about as much as my parents could do.

Dad had a second career which kept him very busy. He worked as a construction equipment company comptroller and executive after retiring from the Air Force. His job and advancing age kept him from being able to man the fire trucks, but he did everything else possible to help keep our volunteer fire department going strong. My mother worked, helped care for relatives and was involved with our church. There wasn't much time for anything else in her life either.

My interest in the firehouse began when I was very young and went with my father to drop off some donations there for some sort of charity. After my parents started allowing me to go to the library and other places within a few minutes walk of our house, I started visiting the firehouse by myself. It was right next door to the public library and had cold soda vending machines located in the foyer.

Our library had the best selection of books and a wonderful children's area, but the heat in the winter and air conditioning in the summer made it very dry. Their drinking fountains had the worst tasting water a mind could ever imagine and they just didn't believe in having any beverage vending machines available. Our library wouldn't even put a pay phone in the entrance lobby until people complained and they got tired of allowing folks to use their reference desk phone.

Whenever I headed up to the library for a school assignment or one of their special programs, I stopped at the firehouse for cold soda. The money went to support the fire department and I got my thirst quenched. Apart from the soda machines, I really enjoyed looking at all the equipment they had. There were probably half a dozen specialized vehicles and all kinds of gadgets in the garage area adjacent to the entrance foyer.

After a while, I got to know some of the guys that were regulars at the firehouse. They knew my parents and always treated me well. I started volunteering to help roll hoses, wash the trucks and clean the place up. I was rewarded for my efforts with rides home on the fire trucks when they were heading out for supplies or free soda and snacks.

I liked hanging out at the firehouse and especially enjoyed listening to all the stories they told. I sat around the kitchen or out back where they had a barbeque area and got an earful of firefighter exploits. Things always got really interesting whenever UFOs were in the news. It seemed that almost every volunteer fireman had some sort of a UFO story to tell. Many had personal experiences on and off the job or knew others that did.

I don't recall his name, but one of the volunteer firemen worked for the Nassau County Parks Department at Salisbury (today known as Eisenhower Park). It's located on Hempstead Turnpike, just up the road from the firehouse. Some time during 1967, he found some strange areas of affected grass on a golf course in the park. Today, we would call these crop circles. Back then, people called them saucer nests. They appeared after a number of people reported seeing strange lights in the sky near and over the park the previous night.

Seeing strange lights in the sky was and remains a common occurrence on Long Island. Because there are so many airports in the region, aircrafts in flight became an easy explanation any for unusual lights or other types of UFOs seen there. This is always a mistake. People that live in areas where planes are frequently seen in the skies get used to seeing them. They know when something different appears and doesn't resemble conventional aircraft.

Most of the UFO sightings and encounters that took place on Long Island while I was growing up went unreported

Most of the UFO sightings and encounters that took place on Long Island while I was growing up went unreported, at least the ones I heard about. The witnesses knew that no one would believe them or that people would say what they saw was nothing out of the ordinary. Even when disc-shaped objects appeared during broad daylight and floated at tree top level in Long Island neighborhoods, people found ways to justify or explain them away as we'll see later.

It wasn't just firemen that hung around the East Meadow Firehouse. Nassau County Police and other First Responders often stopped by. They also had fascinating stories to tell and some involved some very strange events. One police officer told us about an incident that occurred when he was off duty. He was driving out east towards Patchogue to visit his sister when it happened. The officer exited the Long Island Expressway and started driving on local roads until he reached an area near Montauk Highway around 10 o'clock at night.

Just before he got to a traffic light, the officer told us how a bright light surrounded his car. There was no sound and his engine suddenly shut off. His was the only vehicle near the bright light at that moment. The officer stuck his head out of the driver's side window to discover the source of the light, but was unable to see it clearly. The light moved away after a few seconds. He watched it head southeast and said it looked like a luminous white ball. At some point it started moving very fast and disappeared from view.

His car still wouldn't start and required a jump from another vehicle to get it going. The motorist that came along to help him arrived just a couple of minutes after the light departed and said to the officer, "What was that?" He decided not to say much and told the other guy that it was probably just a low flying plane. The other motorist didn't ask any more questions.

After he got his car started, the officer headed straight for his sister's house and arrived there about a half hour after the incident. His sister lived near the water on Patchogue Bay. He told her what happened and she shrugged it off as nothing unusual. She told her brother that she and many of the residents in her area often saw odd lights at night. Most figured they were lights from low flying small aircrafts or lights from the masts of boats coming and going in the bay. Again, it became easier to explain away the bizarre phenomenon then to challenge the status quo. The officer spent that night at his sister's house.

Although he planned on doing some fishing early the next morning, the officer woke up feeling drained and sick to his stomach. He decided to sleep in. When he finally got up around nine o'clock in the morning, the officer looked in the bathroom mirror and was shocked to discover that there were red blotches all over his face. They were itchy and irritating, but before he could schedule a doctor's appointment, they cleared up.

Patchogue saw a number of amazing UFO events over the years including an encounter involving some town workers fixing roads. Years after the officer's sighting, two men contacted me after attending a UFO seminar that I gave in the area during the 1980s. They couldn't wait to tell me what happened to them in 1965. Both men were part of a five man work crew fixing roads along Bay Avenue at that time.

While they were filling in pot holes, one of the guys turned around and saw a large disc-shaped object. It was moving slowly towards them from the bay area. As it moved over land and came closer, the worker alerted the other guys on his work crew. All of them saw the thing. The object came within ten feet of them, hovering at just above tree top level. It was so close that they were able to easily judge its size at around fifty feet in diameter.

The two witnesses that told me their story said that everyone on the work crew stood motionless watching the disc as it suddenly stopped and changed direction. The thing was now headed toward an area near Shorefront Park. Although they heard no sounds coming from the disc, they commented that all the guys on their crew later agreed that they felt a kind of weird vibration at the time of the incident.

Cars and other vehicles driving by them were oblivious to the disc's presence. The only other people that noticed it were a few children on bikes. The workmen said that the kids stopped and stared in amazement at the craft. Other bikers rode by without even bothering to look. The workmen were freaked out by the fact that so few people noticed the huge object.

That part of the story reminded me of the many accounts I heard from train riders in Brooklyn and Queens that reported seeing discs and other objects on raised subway platforms. There could be a thousand people standing there waiting for a train, yet only a few would notice an unusual object in the sky just above them. It reminded me how personal a UFO sighting could be.

After the object vanished from their sight, one of the crewmembers said that they used their truck radio to notify a supervisor about the sighting, but nothing came of it. They were told to stop by and see him at the end of their shift. When they did, he told them to fill out a standard incident form that workers used to report accidents with town vehicles, injuries and so on. They decided not to bother.

The crewmembers were amazed that no one took the incident seriously or seemed to care much about it. It wasn't like what you see in the movies or on television when a UF is spotted and all sorts of police cars and military vehicles arrive on the scene. Even the witnesses themselves stopped talking about the incident by the next day. It was like it never happened.

Back at the firehouse, everyone was fascinated by the officer's unusual encounter. After he told the story, one of the fire rescue guys chimed in with one of his own. He said that he was called out to a house a few miles away from the firehouse. A family was swimming in their backyard pool in the late evening when a brightly lit object appeared over their backyard. Two adults and two adolescent children were in the pool at that time and all saw the object. They described it as a bright light, but couldn't see any shape. It remained over their backyard for a few minutes, then left.

Several neighbors came out to see what was causing the brightness. They also saw the light, but were equally clueless to its shape. More disturbing then seeing something like that was the fact that the family in the pool all began to feel sick after the encounter. All had red blotches on their faces and were taken to Meadowbrook Hospital for treatment. Although he didn't know what became of the family, the entire incident was quickly forgotten.

The East Meadow Fire Department had no official policy that I knew of regarding calls involving UFOs or other strange phenomenon. Most of these type of incidents were listed as having an unknown cause or ignored apart from their conventional aspects. None of the firefighters raised a stink over how these cases were handled. Even though most of the positions in the department were voluntary and unpaid, no one wanted to be kicked out or put on suspension over something that most people didn't even believe existed.

Today, it's entirely possible that a special manual or set of instructions exists for dealing with situations involving UFOs. These might originate from any number of local, state or federal government agencies including FEMA or the U.S. Military.

However, in the 1960s, it was enough for firefighters to understand that Long Island was a special place filled with government contractors. I am sure most local fire, police and other departments would cooperate with federal or military authorities and accept whatever cover story was offered in the name of national security.

With an island full of government contractors and a defense industry that accounted for so many good jobs, no one wanted to rock the boat. Diplomats and their staff serving at the United Nations in New York City had travel limits on the island to prevent spying. None were allowed out any further east then Route 110, which crossed Long Island from North to South and was the unofficial boundary between Nassau and Suffolk Counties.

Most of the government contractors were located in Suffolk County. Any diplomats or diplomatic staffs that wanted to go out east past Route 110 required special permission to do so. If local or county police saw cars or other vehicles with diplomatic plates in areas east of 110, they would routinely stop them to find out what they were doing and if they had permission to be in those areas.

I must have been around eight years old when I started visiting the firehouse. It was bizarre to hear UFO and paranormal stories from First Responders. I mean, these were well-trained and serious people that were on the ball! They weren't untrained observers or nut jobs that sat around drinking all day or having drug induced hallucinations. That's how the government and news media tended to label most UFO witnesses and these people were at the opposite end of that spectrum.

By the age of nine, I became utterly fascinated by the subject of UFOs and other areas of the paranormal. It wasn't just the firehouse stories that got me hooked. There were so many things that happened over the years that looking back on it today really freaks me out. Back then, I just assumed that everyone heard stories like I did and experienced weird events all around them.

By the time I was ten years old, I had already read several books about UFOs including Flying Saucers Serious Business by Frank Edwards and The Flying Saucers Are Real by Donald Keyhoe. I was fascinated by the various witness reports, cases involving physical evidence and pilot sightings, but not one of those could hold a candle to what would soon happen just up the street from my house.

It was 1965 and East Meadow was an unincorporated village that was a part of the Town of Hempstead. The town decided to purchase a lot owned by a local construction company and build a town pool on the property. The population of East Meadow had gone from 2,000 to 25,000 people in less than ten years and that didn't even count the adjoining villages. Uniondale, Westbury and Levittown had as many or even more people living in them than we did. A town pool in that area was needed and welcomed. The idea was sold to the voters as a water recreation, conservation and safety issue.

Most people in middle class bedroom communities like East Meadow wanted their own backyard pool and most opted for above ground models. They were easy to put up in the summer and take down for winter. This wasted a lot of water and created safety issues after young children started sneaking into their pools and drowning. A town pool would help save water, save lives and provide a competition-sized pool for schools, clubs and organizations that sponsored those kinds of events.

Like most other things that happened in our little village, the uncomplicated pool project found itself surrounded by and knee deep in the paranormal from the beginning. As soon as the Town of Hempstead chose the huge piece of property located at the corner of East Meadow, Newbridge and Prospect Avenues for the future pool site, bizarre stories about that location and strange traditions associated with it became the talk of the town.

The property that the town ultimately purchased was owned by a guy named Hoeffner (pronounced Heffner) and most of the locals called it Hoeffner's Corner or Hoeffner's Lot. Veteran's Memorial Park, a sports complex with large pools and other facilities is located on that spot today. Back then, it was a dusty lot filled all kinds of construction equipment and supplies for Hoeffner's company. With new stores, a funeral home, medical offices, churches and synagogues popping up on the same street, no one was sorry to see what they considered to be an "eyesore' replaced with a brand new public pool and recreation complex.

Apart from all the construction stuff, Hoeffner also owned an historic house which sat off to one side of the lot. Once known as the Noon Inn, the building was a run-down, two story wooden structure with window shutters that were always kept in the closed position. No one had lived there after 1960 and most of the neighborhood kids thought the place was haunted. Hoeffner occasionally used the old building for storage, but most of his employees hated going in there. The place gave off very negative vibes.

The Noon Inn was built around 1840 and replaced an even older structure. Instead of being demolished to make room for the pool project, the building was moved to Old Bethpage Village Restoration in 1966. There it joined other historic Long Island buildings in a re-creation of life on Long Island during the 1800's. The building was restored to its original glory and can be visited at Bethpage Village today.

John H. Noon operated the building as an inn from 1848 until 1859 and became it's best known proprietor. After buying a hotel in Plainedge, Noon moved on and several other owners kept the place going until 1913. Some time after that the Hoeffner Family bought the house and surrounding property. Surprisingly, the original name of the inn had less to do with John H. Noon and more to do with a somewhat bizarre local tradition.

Unexplained animal mutilations involving sheep were reported in the area and most of these occurred during the day. In an even stranger part of Long Island known as Mount Misery

Noon became a kind of witching hour in East Meadow. No one remembers why, but early settlers spread tales about strange happenings that occurred just around the noon hour. Once an area known for wool production during a time when the place was called the Eastern Meadow of the Village of Hempstead, UFOs may have had an early influence on the local's obsession with noontime.

Unexplained animal mutilations involving sheep were reported in the area and most of these occurred during the day. In an even stranger part of Long Island known as Mount Misery, reports of unexplained sheep and cattle mutilations are recorded in church journals dating back three hundred years. These events often occurred after strange lights or objects were seen in the sky. Coincidentally, the Noon Inn now sits not far from that area.

Other parts of Long Island have experienced similar unexplained phenomenon, including one case in Queens where a St Bernard dog was found mutilated and turned inside out after strange lights were seen in the sky over that area the night before. During the 1980s, the Flushing Meadow Park Zoo was closed after almost all of the animals housed there were found mutilated by a caretaker who came to open the place up one morning. Several employees told me that strange lights were seen hovering over the Zoo the night before. The Zoo was demolished and rebuilt from the ground out.

Midday was also a time when people turned up missing during the early days of East Meadow. However, given the need for cheap labor and ship hands in nearby cities and towns, they may have been kidnapped for those purposes. During those days the area was a crossroads where people headed out in any number of directions and lots of strangers came and went, noticed and unnoticed.

The East Meadow Volunteer Fire Department blew and tested their siren exactly at noon each day. They used the siren to call volunteers to the firehouse in case a fire was reported. The idea for using noon as the testing time was practical, but also came from a much older tradition of churches in the area ringing their bells at noontime to ward off evil. What really freaked me out was how quiet it always got after the noontime fire siren stopped sounding. It was the one time of day when you would actually hear quiet instead of any noise.

The Noon Inn was used as an inn, a small hotel, a private house, a Speakeasy and a tavern during it's bizarre and unusual history. Two rumors have always existed about the place. The first told a tale that George Washington once stayed there during the Revolutionary War. That was untrue because the building wasn't old enough to be around in the days when our most famous General and first President of the United States was still alive.

The Washington story turned out to be a silly notion created by children who attended a school that once sat on the property where the East Meadow Public Library now exists. Most who attended that school agree that the legend was created to annoy teachers who were often unable to confirm or refute the story, being unsure about the actual age of the building. It wasn't until much later that historians were able to verify that the Noon Inn wasn't built until years after Washington's death. However, it should be stated that a smaller roadhouse existed there at a much earlier date.

Newbridge Avenue was a road built over an old Indian Trail that existed at a crossroads of trade routes used by early settlers, Native Americans and traveling merchants. It's likely that travelers going north to south or east to west used or crossed that trail. This made it an ideal location for a road house or inn. Always an important junction that is still very busy today, local farmers and apple growers sold their crops and goods there on weekends for years right up through the first half of the twentieth century. After the area was built up with houses and a few small businesses, local merchants felt threatened by the open marketplace and local authorities closed it down.

The second rumor about the Noon Inn concerned smugglers and bootleggers. It was suggested that the original area was a haven for smugglers avoiding British tariffs in pre-revolutionary times. Most historians believe that to be correct. That crossroads was the perfect location for a smuggler meet up point and far enough away from large towns to be ignored by the authorities in those days. The bootlegger stories were also true.

The crossroads location of the Noon Inn made it a great place for bootleggers to use as a meeting place to sell and distribute their products. With that in mind, the old inn also became a speakeasy by default. After prohibition ended, it transitioned into a legitimate tavern. Before that, it's not hard to imagine that the place saw its share of violence and debauchery during the days when smugglers and bootleggers used it as a kind of headquarters.

Stories of murder and mayhem are as much a part of the Noon Inn as the rumors told about the place. It was said to harbor a very negative atmosphere or evil force, but that might have been the result of the location instead of the building itself. After it was moved to Bethpage Village Restoration, the negative vibes vanished and the place seemed almost cheery according to most people that have visited it (including myself).

In 1962, the Noon Inn lived up to its scary reputation when several teenagers managed to break into the old building one July night during summer vacation. While exploring the old rooms, they moved up the stairs to the second floor. The three boys, aged 13-14, apparently encountered a vagrant who was using the old inn as a place to sleep at night after he had robbed houses during the day. No one knows exactly what happened next, but the three teens ended up stabbed to death.

Their bodies were found a week later by a worker who regularly checked the old building for animals that might wonder in through small holes and get trapped inside. The vagrant was arrested in another town several weeks later and confessed to the murders when the police found some items on him that had belonged to the teens. After that, the Inn became known as the death house among area young people.

By Halloween of the same year, the old building became a dare point to test the bravery of male teens living nearby. Several young people had been arrested trying to break into the place after the murders. A small group of older teens consisting of two boys and two girls managed to get inside on Halloween Eve, despite additional locks and precautions to keep people out. They began to explore the building while drinking beer and laughing about the reputation of the place.

Once they reached the second floor, the teens made themselves at home sitting on some old furniture while they drank. The place got very cold after a few minutes and a feeling of foreboding filled the group. Just as they were preparing to leave, one of the girls spotted what looked like a floating light near one of the walls. When they all turned to look, the light took the shape of three faces that seemed to be coming out of the wall. They were the faces of the murdered boys!

Rather then wait for anything else to happen, the group of four ran out of the building.

Although it wasn't a part of their original plan, the teens all told their parents about it. The police were called and checked out the inn. All they found were some beer bottles. There were thoughts about charging the four with trespassing, but it seems the teens were so frightened by the ghostly faces that the fear they experienced was considered punishment enough.

Their ghost story spread throughout East Meadow and no further attempts were made to break in to the old building. The same night that this happened, the vagrant that murdered the boys committed suicide in his jail cell by jamming his head up between some pipes near the ceiling until he suffocated. Coincidence or supernatural justice? Suburban legend or true story? Who knows?

As the Town of Hempstead project moved forward, the negative vibes of the Noon Inn were soon forgotten and the town pool and recreation center began to take shape. Before anyone knew it, the pool was finished and opened for use in the summer of 1966. We went there and everyone seemed to be having a great time. It turned out to be a wonderful facility, apparently so wonderful that it attracted visitors from out of this world.

My parents weren't big on extravagant vacations. Each summer they would take two weeks off and we would vacation in places like Upstate New York, Williamsburg, Virginia, Pennsylvania Dutch Country or maybe Florida, if my father got a bonus. Because the summer of 1966 was a particularly hot one, they decided that we should spend our two weeks at a dude ranch in the Adirondack Mountains. It was cool at night and reasonably pleasant during the day.

The object eventually departed by going straight up into the sky at a tremendous speed. All these are things that disc-shaped UFOs have been known and reported to do.

Less than a week after we left, the town pool was filled with fun seekers. Just around midday (there's that noon thing again), a huge saucer-shaped object appeared low in the sky over the pool. I don't have all the details because virtually nothing appeared in the newspaper about it and the electronic media completely ignored the event. However, several witnesses have told me enough through the years to piece together what happened.

According to people that were actually there at the time, no one really got all that upset. It wasn't like in the movie Jaws where everyone came scrambling to get out of the water. The object appeared for a very short period of time and made no sound. It went back and forth, up and down the Prospect Avenue side of the pool property and then moved away towards the south shore. Once there, witnesses said that the disc-shaped object sped upwards at a tremendous speed until it was out of sight.

The entire incident at the pool might have taken a minute, but seemed as though it lasted much longer. Photos were taken, but all them were confiscated and I'll get to that part of the story shortly. Most of the witnesses guessed that the object could have been between seventy-five and one-hundred feet in diameter. Whatever it was, it was huge!

The bizarre thing is about what happened at the pool is that it was an absolutely classic daylight disc sighting. Most witnesses agreed that the object was both a dull and shiny silvery color, depending on what part of it you looked at. It followed modern roads that once were ancient trails, made no sound and didn't necessarily frighten people. The object eventually departed by going straight up into the sky at a tremendous speed. All these are things that disc-shaped UFOs have been known and reported to do.

Years after the pool incident, I meet a Town of Hempstead Department of Public Safety Officer at one of my public lectures at the Uniondale Public Library in the late 1980s. Members of that department were peace officers charged with guarding town property. The man I'll call Inspector Johnson was a nice guy and casual acquaintance of my dad.

Inspector Johnson wanted to speak with me after the lecture ended. I recognized him because he was a supervisor and turned up at all sorts of town events my family attended throughout the years. He was surprised that I mentioned the UFO incident at the pool. Most people had long forgotten it or never heard of it in the first place. He wasn't there when the UFO appeared, but was part of a detail of officers sent over to the pool to close it down for the day and get everyone off the property.

Because the pool was also a park and a fairly large facility, closing it down during the middle of a hot day was not an easy task. After arriving at the pool around 1:30pm, a couple of the guards that were on duty at the time of the UFO incident gave Inspector Johnson a thumbnail sketch of what happened. By 2:30pm, Johnson and the town guards had managed to get all the swimmers off the property and closed the place down.

After locking the entrance gates to the pool area and closing up the locker room, Johnson walked over to the pool and noticed that water had changed color to a weird reddish tint. The maintenance crew at the pool had already noticed this and reported it to their superiors. By four o'clock that afternoon, several maintenance trucks arrived. Johnson assumed they belonged to the Town of Hempstead, but wasn't sure.

Maintenance workers covered the fence that surrounded the pool with large cloth tarpaulins. The fence was wrought iron or metal and allowed people to see through it. The placing of the cloths secluded the pool area from public view. Meanwhile, more guards and other town officials and workers arrived on the scene. Most of the guards were stationed in the parking lot areas and a few in cars that blocked the vehicle entrances to the pool and park.

Inspector Johnson told me that he felt they were trying to avoid creating a big scene. That's probably what would have happened if local fire trucks, Nassau County Police vehicles and First Responders showed up. The idea was to keep a low profile and clean up whatever mess this was. None of the bathers complained about any ill health affects before leaving the pool area, so Johnson assumed no one was injured by the encounter.

Inspector Johnson was a curious guy and later asked some local emergency medical and rescue workers he knew to find out if they heard about anyone calling for medical assistance after the pool incident. None had as far as they knew, but people from the entire Town of Hempstead used the pool and might have gone directly to their local hospital for help. If anyone was harmed, I haven't heard about it.

Like most Long Islanders, Johnson heard his own share of UFO stories from guards at various posts and people he knew over the years. Since he never actually saw anything in the sky that he felt couldn't be explained, Inspector Johnson assumed they were just seeing airplanes or something else. Up until the pool incident, he found it hard to accept that UFOs were frequent visitors to Long Island. After that, he wasn't so sure.

By the time Johnson went off duty at around eight o'clock that evening, a lid of silence descended over the entire incident. No one was talking about it and the media wasn't reporting it. When he returned the next day, the pool was still closed. The maintenance workers had drained all the water out of the pool and people in and out of protective suits were scrubbing down everything. That job was finally completed by around five o'clock. Inspector Johnson left shortly afterward.

Two days after the strange event, the pool was ready to reopen. It was as if nothing at all had happened. The place was cleaned up, the tarpaulins were taken down from the fences and life went on. Johnson and the other guards were given a cover story and told not to discuss what happened with anyone. The cover story became fodder for a few humorous moments in our house after we returned from our vacation just a couple of days later.

We were still unpacking the car when I noticed that men in dark suits were knocking on doors up and down the block in our neighborhood. My mother said it was probably church or sales people. My father didn't comment. By the time we got all of our vacation stuff out of the car, we were all ready for some lemonade made from fresh lemons that we purchased at a farm stand on the way home.

While we were sitting in our kitchen enjoying the cold refreshment, someone knocked at the door. I ran to answer it thinking it was one of my friends stopping by to find out if I was back from vacation. Instead, I found myself face to face with one of the well-dressed men I noticed earlier.

I called for my dad who came right away. Once he arrived at the door, the guy showed my father an Identification Card. It identified him as an FBI Agent. Because of my father's position in the military, it wasn't that unusual to have FBI Agents stopping by while he was still active. I remember that two came to the door to get him during the Cuban Missile Crisis even though I thought he was retired by then.

The agent said something about an incident that occurred at the town pool earlier in the week. He said that he was just stopping by to let people in the surrounding neighborhoods know that everything was alright and there was no need to worry. My father had no idea what the guy was talking about, so the agent gave him a brief summary.

It seemed that a few days before, something had gotten loose from Brookhaven National Labs. The object was some kind of experiment they were working on and the scientists involved lost control of it. That's why it ended up hovering above the new town pool. As far as stories that some were telling about discolored water go, the agent guessed that fuel from the experiment might have been accidentally dumped into the pool. He said that the water was changed out just to be on the safe side and the whole place was scrubbed down from stem to stern.

The agent concluded his summary by telling my father that the FBI wanted to reassure people that nothing serious or unexplained happened. Everything was fine now and anyone that wanted to use the pool could do so safely and without concern. He just wanted everyone on our block to know this was nothing to worry about and that it probably wouldn't happen again.

After his little monologue, the agent asked my dad if anyone in our family actually saw the object. My father told him we hadn't. Then he asked if my father knew of anyone that might have taken photos or movie film of the object. He reminded my father that this was a sensitive situation. Anyone with photos or film footage of the object was obliged to turn them over to federal authorities.

At this point my father got very annoyed. I knew that look. He flipped out his own military identification card, showed it to the agent and told him to stop wasting his time. Then he slammed the door shut. Although he had great respect for members of the FBI, he didn't appreciate the agent telling him what his duty was. He also didn't care for the ridiculous cover story told by the agent that no one with any intelligence was going to believe or accept anyway.

My father headed back into the kitchen area and told my mother about the agent and his story. They both had a laugh at the agent's expense and when I thought about it later, I got the joke. It was like a neighbor coming to your door and apologizing for their dog getting loose and digging up your garden. It was a silly explanation for what was an incredible and still unexplained incident.

What made it even more ridiculous was that our neighborhood was filled with former and current government employees, retired members of the military, college professors and defense industry workers. They all knew darn well that the government didn't have anything technologically available to them that would explain what happened at the town pool.

On my next visit to the firehouse, I asked some of the firemen if they knew anything about what happened at the pool. That was a first for me. I listened to their stories and never asked any questions, but I felt a burning need to know more about what happened at the pool. It was the very beginning of my experiences as a paranormal investigator and researcher.

One of the guys said that they received a huge number of calls into the firehouse just after it happened. With no discernable emergency and most of their trucks out on other calls, they passed the information on to the Nassau County Police. They probably ignored the information and treated it as a nuisance call or were told not to respond after the Town of Hempstead decided to handle the whole situation themselves.

The pool incident peaked my interest in UFOs and ended up being the catalyst for some amazing conversations in our home. The weekend after we returned from vacation, several of my father's Air Force buddies stopped by for a barbeque. They were all retired and lived throughout the tri-state area of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut. Although my dad sometimes visited them, most of his friends came to our house.

These gatherings were small and meant just for the guys. The families got together once or twice a year, but that was a massive undertaking because most of his friends had two or three children each. Those events were barbeques held at reserved picnic areas in larger parks. My father preferred smaller gatherings where he and his buddies could talk freely and without too much constraint.

My mother was working the late shift that weekend at Meadowbrook Hospital, leaving my dad to entertain his friends. He was up to the task and I helped by preparing some cold plates and the stuff he needed for the barbeque. No one did barbeque better than my father. He had two barbeque grills in the backyard and both were almost always going on summer weekends. The wonderful smell drove our neighbors crazy and many stopped by to sample his wares.

My dad was a terrific all around cook. We spent an hour on Friday afternoon picking apples from a tree on the side of our house. I was amazed as I watched my father whip up three apple pies from scratch in no time flat for the weekend barbeque. He used to laugh and say that he learned to cook out of necessity. My grandmother was a terrible cook.

As I expected, the subject of the pool incident came up during that weekend's get together. My father didn't say anything about it until a neighbor stopped by. My dad and his Air Force buddies were sitting around the picnic table chewing the fat when our neighbor came over and asked him if he heard anything more about the object that appeared over the pool.

I was in the kitchen opening some bottles of beer for the guys and heard the entire exchange through the kitchen window. The conversation went something like this:

"Didn't you get a visit from the FBI?" my father asked.

"No, I heard they came through the block, but I was at work and my wife was out shopping," our neighbor replied.

"All I know is what Agent ____ told me," My father continued, "He said that some experiment got loose from Brookhaven and took a piss in the pool." Everyone laughed as my dad went on to tell our neighbor and his buddies the ridiculous cover story invented by the FBI. I was surprised that he recalled the agent's name.

Everyone had some good laughs at the explanation. Our neighbor stayed a few minutes longer to sample some of my dad's delicious assortment of steaks, ribs and chicken, and then he left. My dad was already tired of talking about the pool thing, but his buddies chimed in with their own possible explanations. One of them mentioned the Avro Car and wondered if what everyone saw was a next generation version of that or something similar.

The Avro Car was a disc-shaped vehicle developed for the U.S. Military. Despite its shape, the circular aircraft had a conventional engine and was very noisy. It was little more than a huge fan that barely flew and eventually burned out its engine. Besides being a huge waste of money with little value as any type of offensive, defensive or reconnaissance craft, most military pilots that chose to say anything about the doomed project considered it a method of plausible denial to help explain away Flying Saucer sightings.

My father and his buddies agreed that the 'secret project' explanation for the object over the town pool was a No Go. Most of the work done at Brookhaven was theoretical, different, small scale or didn't involve aircrafts tested on the premises. It they came up with some sort of idea for a secret flying device, it would be developed and tested elsewhere. Why test something secret over Long Island and the New York Metropolitan Area where millions of people live when you could fly it over a desert base where the only witnesses would be a few drunken cowboys and some prairie dogs. The argument made sense then and still does today.

One of my father's friends asked, "Did anyone call Wright-Patterson and tell them that a Flying Saucer flew over the town pool and stopped to take a leak?" Everyone laughed. Wright-Patterson Air Force Base was the home to Project Blue Book, the official U.S. Government investigation into the UFO Phenomenon which ended in 1969-70. The Air Force had the duty of collecting reports during the active period of the project. A panel of experts later examined the evidence and drew their own conclusions.

Blue Book never had a budget of more than $100,000 and never employed more than a dozen people at any one time. Few in the military had any use for it. When you consider the fact that the government recently spent over thirty million dollars a year to examine the effects of nocturnal bovine emissions (cow farts) on the environment, it's easy to understand why such a low budget and low priority program like Blue Book wasn't taken seriously.

The Air Force hoped that Blue Book would keep them from constantly having to comment on or explain away UFO incidents. Forms were sent to witnesses so they could report their sightings. The media was told that the information being collected would be examined at a later date by scientific, engineering and military experts. No statements would be issued until all the results were in.

When an information hungry public and media grew weary of waiting for Blue Book to report their results, the plan fell apart. The media continued to hound government and military authorities to explain the strange things that were happening in the skies over America. After years of trying to get people to take Blue Book seriously, the Air Force decided to put the project to bed and try more conventional methods of hiding or distorting the truth.

They began that process by convening the 'Ad Hoc Committee To Review Project Blue Book' in 1966, the same year as the pool incident. While the two events are probably not related, it was becoming increasingly clear to the Air Force that Blue Book printed forms, off the shelf explanations for UFO sightings and denials that anything strange was going on no longer satisfied people's curiosity. They needed fast explanations that took moved people's thoughts away from alien spacecrafts and toward simple scientific explanations (whether they made sense or not).

After the discussions that the Air Force had about Blue Book, they established a review committee of scholars to take on some of the more interesting cases in their files. A number of scientific luminaries would eventually be involved with this whole process including Carl Sagan, Edward I. Condon and J. Allen Hynek to name a few. Hynek became an alleged proponent of the cause to scientifically investigate the UFO phenomenon and take it seriously in later years, but in 1967 he angered UFO witnesses and believers after making the ridiculous claim that a March sighting was the result of swamp gas.

"All I know is what Agent _____ told me," My father continued, "He said that some experiment got loose from Brookhaven and took a piss in the pool."

Back at the barbeque, my dad and his friends enjoyed a few more laughs over the pool incident explanation and Project Blue Book. They recalled the time that New Jersey Police Officers found some kind of landing area of affected grass that they thought was related to a UFO incident. They notified the Air Force and had shifts of officers stand guard to preserve the scene until the military could send some people out there.

When the Air Force guys arrived, they pulled down a rope that the police used to cordon off the area and started walking all over the affected grass. They smoked and threw their cigarette butts down on the ground. After taking a couple of photos and collecting forms that the witnesses filled out, the Air Force guys told the police officers it was probably just a fairy ring and left.

My father and his friends probably felt sorry for the police officers, but they knew this was exactly why Blue Book had to go. Most of the guys that got Blue Book duty hated it and the entire project was giving the Air Force a black eye. However, that didn't mean that most pilots in the Air Force didn't take UFOs seriously. Just the opposite was true. No one was laughing at the encounters they were having with these objects.

As their conversation on these matters progressed, my father reminded his buddies about a story told by Chuck Yeager at a base barbeque held a Wright-Patterson a couple of years before. My parents and I attended that event and heard the story told first hand.

Known as the "fastest man alive" and "the guy with the right stuff," Yeager was the first pilot to break the sound barrier in 1947. He was flying an experimental Bell X-1 jet and achieved a speed of over 700 mph. As keynote Speaker at the barbeque, Yeager gave an inspirational talk and then took some questions.

One of the active duty pilots asked Yeager what he thought about Flying Saucers. Chuck paused a moment, then said, "I saw one." He went on to tell the tale of how during the testing of one of the Bell X-planes, he was flying at a terrific speed when a classic flying disc came along side of his aircraft. He guessed that it was around thirty to fifty feet in diameter, but said it could have been larger.

The object had no trouble keeping up with his aircraft and eventually moved out and directly in front of Yeager's experimental jet. That scared the crap out of him, because the X-planes were little more than flying bullets with limited control available to the pilots. If that thing slowed down or suddenly stopped in mid-air as UFOs had been known to do, Yeager knew he would end up "like a bug on a car window."

Fortunately for Chuck, the flying disc vanished after what seemed like a few minutes, but might have been just a matter of seconds. Yeager continued his story by describing the strange events that occurred after his flight. Normally, he was debriefed by Air Force personnel, a flight surgeon and some engineers that worked for the company that built the engine for his aircraft. They all watched the film from that day's flight and discussed it later.

When Chuck showed up for the debriefing after his encounter with the disc, he said that there were only two people in the room. The projector and screen used to view the day's films were not set up. As he walked over to a large table where the men were sitting, one of them introduced himself as someone with Air Force Security. Neither of the men sitting at the table told Chuck their names or presented any IDs. At that point he knew that this was not going to be a standard debriefing.

"Let's begin by discussing what you saw during today's flight," one of the men said while the other sat taking notes. Yeager was annoyed by the refusal of the men to properly introduce themselves and the fact that he had never heard of civilians being involved with Air Force Security. In fact, he had never heard of Air Force Security, apart from the Air Police. The Air Police and Security Police (which they were called later) eventually became a part of the Air Force Security Forces, but they didn't exist under that name during those days.

The man who did all the talking went on to explain to Yeager that what he saw during that flight was a new type of secret aircraft being tested by the Air Force. He asked Chuck to keep the whole thing under his hat and not to talk about it. I remember that when Yeager told the Wright-Patterson barbeque audience his response to the man in the suit, it was something like, "I said to the gentleman that if that's true, what the hell am I doing flying this pile of outdated crap? I should be testing your new secret aircraft."

Everyone laughed knowing that Yeager and his friends were exactly the pilots that would be testing any new types of aircraft. Chuck went on to say that he angrily left the room after his exchange with the man in the dark suit. He knew that whatever it was that he saw during that test flight, it didn't belong to the Air Force. While he never stated that what he saw was an alien spacecraft, Yeager's story spoke volumes about how pilots felt about their UFO sightings and how they were treated after a UFO encounter.

Military Pilots are always portrayed as national heroes and highly trained professionals, and rightly so, until they report seeing or encountering a UFO. If the incident manages to remain secret, they are told they were mistaken, that they saw a secret aircraft and shouldn't talk about it or that it's none of their business. If the news media becomes aware of it and no one accepts whatever cover story the military offers, the pilots become expendable. The might be accused of being ill, delusional, drunk, temporarily insane or worse.

None of my father's buddies made any attempt to question Yeager's story. They knew the drill and what pilots faced when they reported UFO sightings. Such incidences always decayed into a game of Catch 22 with no winners. To make matters worse, the losers were almost always the pilots and the public's right to know.

Even more interesting were the stories coming out of occasional encounters and limited hostilities by proxy with the Soviet Union. One such incident involved the Cuban Missile Crisis and my father. I was only six years old during the fall of 1962, so I do not remember much about that time. I do recall that my father was supposed to be retired from the Air Force and that he was working in an executive position for a large construction equipment company. He used to bring all kinds of toy crane and bulldozer models home for me to play with.

I had just started First Grade at Meadow Lawn Elementary a few days before when I got home from school on a chilly fall day. My mother was on the phone for a long time and that was strange. My mother liked talking to people in person, but hated taking time out of her day to talk on the telephone. Looking back, I think her habit of "keeping it short" came about because my father always received so many important calls while he was still active military.

I don't recall who she was speaking with, but my mother was acting strangely mechanical. She acknowledged my arrival home, asked me to hang up my coat and go into my room to change into my play clothes. After I emerged from my room, she was still in our kitchen on the wall phone. I grabbed a soda and sat down at the table. After a couple of minutes, she finally hung up the phone and said we would be eating dinner early that night.

My father walked in the door at least two hours earlier than expected. My mother didn't seem surprised and both of them went into their bedroom to have a quiet conversation. After a couple of minutes, they emerged and told me that dad would be going a way for a few days, or maybe a week to his "other job." I had no idea what they were talking about, but things moved very fast that night.

My mother made a fast dinner. By the time we finished, some men came to our door. They were FBI agents. I knew that because I heard my father talking to them in our living room. I was sent to my room, but my father came in a few minutes later to say goodbye to me. One agent remained in our house, while the other got in a car with my father and another man that was driving.

My father came and went for about three weeks and didn't talk about what happened during that time. The FBI guys stayed with us on and off, but mostly when my father was home. They kept an incredibly low profile, so our neighbors barely noticed. Most either worked for or knew people that worked for government contractors, so they knew not to ask any questions.

During another one of my dad's weekend barbeques, one of his buddies started up a conversation about the Cuban Missile Crisis. Our nation was in the middle of the 1968 USS Pueblo incident. All of those present were as disgusted as they could be with the government's failure to prevent the capture of a U.S. Navy electronic spy ship by the North Koreans.

After listening to the roundtable of complaints from the former military men, my father took his own turn and spoke in hushed tones. He told those present how a lack of leadership committed to democratic ideals in political and military circles would lead to the decay of our nation and loss of personal freedoms. He bitterly complained about how he had been temporarily reactivated during the Cuban Missile Crisis just because the government didn't have enough qualified personnel available for such a huge emergency.

While talking about the missiles in Cuba, one of the former military officers present mentioned something about military aircraft chasing UFOs. He recently had his own encounter with one and wondered what everyone's thoughts on the matter were. A few of the guys chimed in with pro and con statements, and then my father told them about some bizarre incidents that occurred during the Cuban Missile Crisis.

He said that the Air Force was going crazy tracking objects coming and going in the South Florida area. With the possibility that missiles could be hurdling our way at any time, these objects that might normally be ignored, were given high priority. Most were high altitude unknowns, but a few were discs tracked on radar and seen by military and civilian vessels.

My father was speaking in a very quiet voice, so it was especially difficult for me to hear him on that occasion. However, I believe he said that during one incident that occurred during the Cuban Missile Crisis, a Coast Guard ship responded to the appearance of a luminous disc which was causing some kind of a disturbance near Key West. When the Coast Guard vessel approached it, the object moved slightly to avoid it. It sounded like the vessel came within fifty feet of the object, and then experienced engine failure. At that point, the disc vanished.

THE SHOE SOLES

The most perplexing of any of the finds were the shoe soles. It was one thing to pick up foil and wax pieces, but quite another to gather personal material that had actually been worn and used. I still have great difficulty accepting that one or both of these shoe soles may be unique. Consequently, much more laboratory time and research have been put into these items. One would think that shoes would be easy to research; they are not. I eventually had to divide the research into four directions: general foot anatomy, infant foot growth and corresponding arch development, shoe manufacture and basic construction, and laboratory analysis of the shoe material. Questionnaires were sent to over thirty shoe companies regarding shoe manufacturing and materials. Shoe sales people, pediatricians, podiatrists and other professional orthopedic people were also contacted. I also acquired some material distributed by the National Shoe Retailers Association on foot anatomy and shoe fitting.

LARGE SOLE

There is some brown darker material on the large sole and what appears to be a very low heel. There is also a little brown material on the side of the sole. It appears that at least part of the sole came up into the shoe to an undetermined height. This footwear may have been waterproofed with this brown rubber material. The brown material seems to be vulcanized to the larger piece and appears to be of a smoother texture, which indicates wear. The rest of the body of the sole has a crackled knobby texture (Figure 110), also indicating some wear. However, since up to one-quarter or one-third of the sole may be missing in the front, there is no way we can tell accurately about its wear pattern.

The large sole was found 150 yards below the buckbrush gap. It's length when found was 5 ¾ inches or nearly 14 cm. It appears to have broken off at the widest part, which would be the ball of the foot. From the broken edge, it may have been another 2 ½ inches longer, but not much shorter. A shoe sizing expert in the east said:

"Upon examination of this partial shoe sole, I find it had been an extremely narrow size, narrower than anything I have ever seen. A full determination could not be made because it is not complete. I do not know what the bone structure of this foot would be, but I sure would like to see an x-ray of it."

When both shoes were examined in a Chicago laboratory, there was not enough of the large sole for a detailed analysis. The laboratory report is as follows;

"The two samples identified as second sole (1 and 2) appear similar. I can see from a microscopical study that the materials are foam rubber. Sample 2 was pyrolyzed (burned) to separate the polymer from the fillers and analyzed by IR, which confirmed it to be urethane foam."

Both of the shoes were apparently made of the same material, but the size differential of the large shoe sole is over one and one third the length of the small one, definitely indicates feet and possibly beings of different sizes. Author Charles J. Hall, author of Millennial Hospitality, points out that if either shoe was made for an alien foot, their life spans may be longer than ours. If this is the case, sturdier shoes which would last longer might be sensible for a foot that did not grow as fast as on earth. He believes that this rather light shoe might be an inner shoe to be worn in a craft. Heavier shoes may have been slipped over this shoe if the wearer left the craft and walked on rough or uneven ground.

SMALL SOLE

As was mentioned in Chapter 4, the small shoe sole was found as I was going over the arroyo site one evening with a Geiger counter. I did not see it at first. On a rocky slope about ten yards away, I found the small dried rubber pieces referred to in a previous Chapter. There were just a few slivers, which I placed in a plastic bag. A little while later I picked up the tiny sole, below the slope where I had found the above-mentioned material. It appeared similar in texture and color to the slivers, but due to gathering darkness I did not make the match until that night in my motel.

Subsequent tests indicate that the dried rubber slivers and the bottom of the small sole were of identical material. Again, water enters our picture. The small sole was found in an area next to the present arroyo water course. When the arroyo braid plugged up with sand and silt, the water was diverted down and alongside a narrow track used by cattle grazing in the arroyo. As I mentioned before, I was there one day during an afternoon rain. The water diverted down this track and stood at a depth of five or six inches, as it spread out into a delta-like configuration, covering the spot where the small shoe sole was found the year before. Whether the sole was washed in over the years or was uncovered where it lay, I do not know. The slope above the sole was rocky with light vegetation. How the tiny pieces of sole ended up ten yards up the slope is a mystery.

The layers of the sole were caked with dried dirt, which I carefully washed out through a handkerchief at the motel. Some fibers and threads came out, as well as several tiny tulip-like seed affairs about 1/16-inch long or one half centimeter. These, on later investigation, turned out to be tumbleweed seed.

The scientific investigation to identify the sole layers was extensive. Three laboratories were involved; two on the west coast and one on the east. Diagnostic procedures on the nine layers of the small shoe sole included infrared spectroscopy, differential scanning calorimetry, polarized light microscopy and the use of a scanning electron microscope. The equipment was necessary to analyze six different materials in the multi-layered sole. I really do not know where the shoe sole was made, but if it was made here, it would have to be after the 1940s when polyurethane foam was developed. This foam rubber in shoes did not come into general use until the 1960s, according to shoe manufacturers contacted. The nylon thread which held the straps together, again, was not available until the 1940s or so. Nylon (first made in 1935) was just beginning to be used before World War II. The white pigment in the bottom rubber layer was identified using polarized light microscopy and energy dispersive x-ray spectroscopy. These tests revealed several materials including the presence of titanium dioxide, a white pigment first discovered in 1916, but not available until 1920.

The first laboratory to look at the sole was a forensic laboratory where a technician separated the nine layers and mounted them on glass slides. The report from the second laboratory revealed that six of the nine layers were made from cellulose plant fiber. The third laboratory analyzed the exact material in each layer, identifying six of the layers as cotton, four of woven cloth and two layers of compressed cotton fibers imbedded in other materials.

The bottom of the small sole became a study in itself. The first laboratory report is as follows:

RESULTS

The sample submitted was brittle and a somewhat plastic gray material found on the bottom of the small sole. The material was identified as plant "pitch" and/or oils(like lecithin), and a minor amount of cellulose and Kaolin-type clay(possibly of the plant "pitch" to be some type of rubber). We were unable to confirm this since the material is not homogeneous.

The laboratory scientist sent with his report a description of how polarized light microscopy helped identify the small outsole, as follows: "PLM particles are identified by observing transparency or opacity, texture (internal and surface) and color, by transmitted and reflected light." He went on to say that "coupled with experience, PLM generally enables the identification of more than 95% of the materials in a given sample."

This data came from the laboratory that was involved in the Shroud of Turin research, mentioned in the introduction. The same scientist at the laboratory was also intrigued by the bottom layer of the small sole and found it "most interesting." He reports:

"It was relatively hard and brittle and appears to me to be mostly filler. It can best be described as a degraded filled material. I also analyzed the sample using an electron microscope with energy dispersive x-ray spectroscopy in order to determine the elements present. The tan material contains a clay, calcium (carbonate), titanium dioxide and a lead pigment."

Sizing the small foot template to fit the shoe, turned out to be a facinating experience. This time a childrens Bannock foot sizing chart was used. Again the foot experts were stumped. One podiatrist wrote;

The length is 4 5/8 inches or an infant size 4 1/2. The width is impossible, which comes to a 9A. This is a non existant size. We don't even have a 1A size for a foot of this width, let alone a 9A. We could not give any further size details, because we've never had a need to measure anything this small.

I found it interesting that over 75 percent of the small sole layers were made of plant fibers, and the bottom sole contained a variety of materials including plant pitch. My first thought was that the back-to-nature and natural fiber people will love this.

For the little sole, I constructed a questionnaire which I sent to shoe companies that have a wide variety of footwear, including casual and dress, and moccasins to cowboy boots. I asked if the rubber formulation above was used today. This question was answered in various ways depending upon the type of footwear manufactured. In general, the answer was yes, natural rubber materials are used today in shoe manufacture, but they are generally giving way to more sophisticated petro-chemicals. In a process the manufacturers called soling, one company listed six different petro-chemical rubber-like products used to make outsoles.

Is it possible that the little shoe had been larger and then shrank to its present dimensions? I posed this question to a forensic scientist who first examined the sole. He replied that some of the cotton layers may have shrunk if they had not been firmly attached to the bottom rubber sole and the top urethane layer. He believed that although these materials had hardened and partially curled, they had essentially maintained their original volume, as well as had the cotton between them. He also pointed out that the nylon thread which was present in the strap remains, could not shrink.

Another question to the shoe manufacturers was, who might have manufactured the little sole? All who responded said they did not know. One said that only a manufacturer's logo could really tell. A consultant for a very large shoe manufacturer in New Jersey was quite familiar with shoe imports. He thought the item was extremely well made and suggested that it may have been "cobbled by hand" in Spain or the south of France. He thought it bore strong resemblance to "alpargates" (soft-soled shoes worn by Indians of Bolivia or Peru).

The inner sole top, which consists of the combined layers (excluding the lower rubber sole), measures 12.3 centimeters (4-7/8 inches) long and 3.8 centimeters (1-1/2 inches) wide at the ball of the foot. Several views of it can be seen in the photo pages. I constructed a sample pattern slightly smaller than the sole, which would have been close to the size foot that fit the shoe. I made a tracing and drawing of a two year old childs foot of the same length. I placed the Arroyo innersole template over the childs foot drawing, this intern was placed over a childs Bannock foot measuring chart and the photo in Figure 118 was the result. The arroyo inner sole template, when placed on top of a modern child's shoe template, was about 35 percent narrower. The layer drawing, as shown in Figure 118, is a representation of the actual layers in the shoe sole. It is certain that layer 3 in the drawing was dyed red and was once the exterior cotton part, of an upper shoe. Layer 4 may have also been an inner layer under the exterior.

One or two of the shoe companies that were contacted sent information about shoe manufacturing, which was helpful. I assumed from the questionnaire answers, that the small sole was well made. From manufacturers' information, I learned that good shoes are made on lasts of the shoe which determine the overall shoe shape and fitting characteristics. A last, basically, is a foot-sized solid piece that remains in the shoe during its entire manufacture. Different length and width lasts give us the different

Fig. 112. Small shoe sole is extremely narrow. It measures 4-7/8 inches by 1-1/8 inches at the narrowest. The foot that fit this shoe would have to be a 9A. No shoes are made narrower than 4A. A shoe store owner in Socorro stated, "That wouldn't fit any foot that ever walked in here."

shoe sizes. We could locate no children's shoe manufacturer who had lasts of this length and width.

Of the basic six types of shoe manufacturing, the little shoe seemed to be a combination of the "stuck-on" method used in everyday and casual footwear, and the "direct molded" process used in children's shoes, everyday general purpose, heavy duty, industrial and water-resistant footwear. The investigation of the small sole shows that the bottom apparently curved up around the perimeter of the shoe for 1/4-inch or so, covering the other seven layers. There is also strong evidence that the bottom rubber sole was vulcanized (a process of heating rubber to improve its strength and elasticity). This would tend to have melded the rubber sole with the cotton fibers, as seen in layer 1 and 1a of (Figure 118). Cotton fibers in layer 5 are also imbedded into layer 6a. There may have been some vulcanizing here or some type of heat process in the production of the 6a layer which could not be identified.

The weaving style of the layers indicates that all of the cloth layers (2, 3, 4, and 7), were standard one-ply weaves. Layers 2, 3 and 7 were basket weaves, and layer 4 was a double warp twill weave. It might be interesting to the reader to know that these weaves were also used on sandals of yucca fiber by the early inhabitants of The Plains of San Augustin some 4,000 years ago. See Figure 118.

Also, in Figure 118, the reader will note the remains of a double sewn cloth strap of some kind. There are indications that there were two. These were not straps as used on sandals today, but were placed at the wide part of the foot and near the heel to support the soft outer fabrics from the inside. Similar supports for the cloth fabric shoes can be found in modern footwear. The only thread on the sole not made of cotton is a two-ply nylon thread which sewed the folded-over strap to itself, and also attached it to the outer exterior layers of the shoe. The nylon thread was probably added for strength. How the cloth straps may have been integrated into the shoe construction appears in the mock-up drawing of what the shoe may have looked like.

Apparently, the outer shoe fabric had been dyed red. One observer thought that the color of the outside shoe layer may have been maroon. The laboratory that analyzed the fibers said that when teased apart, the outside of the yarn appears uniformly red, but it did appear that the inner fibers had not retained as much dye as the outer fibers. Close examination of the inner support straps found alternating threads of red and white which would have originally appeared pink.

This finding touched off another search into the UFO literature to see what colors, if any, might be associated with extra-terrestrials or ETs. My main source was the Leonard H. Stringfield Status Reports. Stringfield's work and findings are considered about as objective as written UFO material can be. In his Status Report III, written in 1982, he lists several colors of alleged ET uniforms. From a MUFON report of 1980, one of the ETs appeared to be wearing a tight-fitting dull metallic green uniform. A report from CUFOS in the 1980s, referred to a sighting in 1944 in which an alien was also wearing a tight-fitting green uniform. An Air Force man had an experience in 1954 in which he and some companions saw some aliens in tight-fitting blue uniforms. Stringfield reported in Status Report V, 1989, that an Air Force photographer was flown to Norton Air Force Base in California in 1973 to film three dead aliens dressed in blue uniforms similar to flight suits. Another of Stringfield's reports, written in 1978, included an abstract from a Mr. T., a civilian in a high technical position. Mr. T. had seen a film in 1953 showing aliens again wearing tight-fitting suits. This time the suits were in a pastel color. In Stringfield's Situation Red, published in 1977, he lists another film seen by a civilian at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, in 1953. This time the clothing on the small bodies was yellow, one-piece uniforms. In Travis Walton's Fire in the Sky, 1997, he lists aliens in "velvety blue uniforms" and some in orange surgical gowns. Many reported sightings in recent years list aliens in gray uniforms with no shoes.

In The Day After Roswell, Corso suggests that the ET pilots themselves may be part of the electrical circuitry in a flight suit that was molecularly aligned. This is an intriguing thought, and it may have something to do with some of the reports of metallic fabric flight suits. It is doubtful, however, that rubber-soled shoes would be a part of this process. The bottom of the small shoe sole does have an unusual wear pattern though (Figure 113). The rubber seems to have been worn more in the middle section of the sole than at either end. This might suggest that it rested on something harder and that some force or weight had been applied, causing the worn spot; for instance, a foot pedal of some sort or repeated trips up and down a ladder, etc.

I have kept an eye out in the past several years for anything in the UFO literature pertaining to footwear. As one might expect, people's claims range from the ridiculous to the sublime. Aliens are reported to sport a wide variety of shoes and boots. These include calf-high rubber boots commonly seen in barnyards, Three Musketeer knee-highs, wide ring affairs as might be seen on the Michelin Man, as well as World War II-type combat boots and elf-like boots turned up at the toe! One of the more interesting reports of an alien footwear was given by Travis Walton. He observed (with the blue uniforms mentioned previously), slightly loose pants tucked into soft dull black boots with a moccasin-type sole. (Several shoe company representatives thought the small sole to be from a moccasin-type shoe.) Walton also described another type of foot gear of a pinkish-tan which is about as close as this research comes to red or maroon.

Some of the more serious reports describing footwear indicate something similar to the drawing found in the upper part of (Figure 118). The shoe design shown has some basis in fact. If the two cloth layers of the shoe encompassed the whole foot and were joined at the top, it would made sense that they folded down to create the look as shown. The shoe sole might also have been the extreme bottom part of a garment. One of the first to examine the shoe sole was a forensic scientist whose laboratory identifies shoes and other crime scene evidence. His comments lend some credence to this theory of the sole possibly being part of a garment. He thinks the fabric scraps remaining between the layers may have been cut on the outside edges. After having the sole in his possession for several months, however, he stated, "If I were asked in a court of law to identify this shoe sole, I could not." He said he had seen lots of canvas and nylon shoes over the years, but commented, "Most of the cloth shoes I have seen were slippers, but you would not need nine sophisticated layers for a slipper!" He went on to say, "This shoe was well insulated, tough and extremely well-made."

HUMAN FOOT DEVELOPMENT

In order to obtain some background information, I decided to research human foot development. The foot turned out to be much more complex than it would at first seem to be. The human foot has 26 bones, 33 joints, and over 100 ligaments. The foot has two main functions: (1) Supporting body weight, and (2) propelling the body forward with a levering action. The foot's flexibility allows it to adapt to uneven surfaces.

The development of the foot during gestation and into the toddler stage was interesting reading, but it was obvious that the foot that fit the small shoe sole was much narrower than anything described in the medical literature. The toddler's foot is somewhat more chubby and wider in proportion to that of older children, and appears flat until the child begins to walk and put weight on the foot. As the normal child develops and spends more time upright (from about one year to two-and-one-half years or so), the foot begins to lose excess fat and an arch develops from more usage. A good deal of cartilage, which is present at birth, starts hardening into bone as the child ages. It was interesting to read about the development of the arch, but there is no indication of an arch visible on the small or large shoe soles.

I sent for some information about the foot development of children of small stature. One study from Hong Kong dealt with the change of foot size with weight-bearing. This study of 2,829 children measured the linear foot growth of boys and girls from age three to eighteen. Another study of 586 children from Japan compared foot length with age and height. The results were consistent with other studies from the United States, showing that normal foot growth in length and width was in synchrony with the advent of walking and the development of the body as a whole. I had hoped to find something in the small foot information that might shed some light on the stature and foot growth of smaller than average children. Instead, I found just the opposite.

Many of the families on The Plains area are Hispanic, having been in New Mexico for generations. Gilbert Amijo (interviewed in Reserve), moved to the tiny town of Horse Springs when his parents bought a small store there is in the 1940s. He said that most of the children he knew went barefoot most of the time and that their feet were so very tough, resulting in what he called "alligator" feet. He recalls getting his first pair of shoes in 1947 when he was ten. Gilbert said, "Some children did not own their own shoes until they were confirmed in the church or graduated from the eighth grade." Boys' first shoes were usually work boots, while girls often got Mary Jane-type shoes that are somewhat open on top. I asked another man who had grown up in the area about sport or canvas shoes. He had attended high school in Magdalena and later in Socorro. He replied that the first sport canvas type shoes he remembers were high-top black tennis shoes worn by basketball players. He did not recall anyone he knew wearing sport-type shoes of canvas or cotton until they went out for sports in junior high or high school. Apparently going barefoot when the body is still growing helps develop strong arches.

A Socorro man who had been selling shoes for over forty years said that because children in the area went barefoot a lot, their feet became wider and required wider shoes. He found that the narrow shoes did not sell and kept very few in stock. He was glad the "jogging type shoe" comes in standard widths today, which helps him keep better track of his inventory. These shoes have no half sizes. He reported that he did not sell as many shoes as he would have liked to Hispanic families when the children were young because they were usually a part of a larger family and had hand-me-downs available. When I showed him the small shoe sole, he turned it over in his hands and said, "That wouldn't fit any foot that ever walked in here."

When I sent out the questionnaires to the shoe companies, I also enclosed a photo of the small shoe sole, the composite drawing of the layers, and the foot template seen in Figures (115-117.) When sizes are referred to in the shoe industry, import sizes must also be taken into consideration. One manufacturer sent a conversion chart for American, French and Italian sizes which differ from each other. I included a question about what age child might wear an insole the size of the small foot sole template. The answers varied. In general, the length would fit a one to two-year-old, but the narrow heel width, according to some professionals, was no wider than that of a young infant.

The urethane foam rubber of the sole's top layer is now hard and crumbly. I believe this layer was originally soft and spongy, but later hardened in the elements. Research indicated that polyurethanes are resins that produce solvent-resistant coatings and rubbers. This rubber can be made either soft or rigid. The soft material is used in a wide variety of materials including crash pads in cars, insulation, sound-proofing, rug-backing, shoe-padding, and other cushioning material.

One of the avenues I pursued was through certified pedorthists who do custom shoe modifications for medical purposes. I was able to learn the custom shoes of today use various gluing procedures to make or modify special orthopedic shoes. Stitching is sometimes used with leather and composition soles. Apparently, neither shoe sole had been involved in any orthopedic construction. I learned that children's shoes go through evolutions. For some time, the shoes were rigid and controlled. Today they are flexible with the least arch support available. One pedorthist who viewed the small sole said, "I have worked on children's and adult foot sizes for years and have never seen a size this small or narrow." He then said, "Some of the fibers in one or two of the layers were as fine as cobwebs."

None of the pedorthists felt the small sole was made for a deformed foot. They also do not think either sole was custom made. The small sole, in particular, was a production model of some kind, judging from the lamination of one or two layers that required special machinery and materials. Although the top of the tiny sole had at one time been soft, the bottom sole material was probably harder for durable wear and traction. Finding the small shoe bottom to be worn very thin, was very interesting. One remarked, "It looks at least 30 to 40 years old, but has the characteristics and construction of a shoe of modern comfort." One manufacturer referred to the Chinese custom, before the turn of the 20th century, of binding women's feet to make them smaller. Although this changed the size dramatically, the foot was apparently short and stubby, but not narrow.

SHOES FROM SOMEWHERE ELSE?

In interviews over the years, Vern Maltais described the alien bodies his good friend Barney Barnett had told him about. Barney said that he had stood very close to the aliens and observed that they were quite small with enlarged heads with no hair. The gray one-piece clothing seemed to have no closures: zippers, buttons, etc. He believed they were males with small oddly-spaced eyes. Very shortly after he made these observations (15 or 20 minutes later) the Army arrived and he was asked to leave. Before leaving the scene, he may have been asked to give his name, address, etc. He later told witnesses that he had been contacted three times about keeping quiet, up to the mid 1960s. There are few credible descriptions of aliens, but to corroborate parts of Barney's description, a government manual known as SOM1-01 surfaced a few years ago. Part of the document, accepted by many as authentic, deals with extraterrestrial entities and their anatomy. Barney's description is similar to two ET types listed in this manual. One has a large head and a 3-1/2 to 4-foot body. The other has wide-set eyes.

The second source is Leonard Stringfield's Status Report VI, p. 127. His witness was a doctor who allegedly did some autopsy work on ETs. He lists the body at just over four feet tall with an enlarged pear-shaped head with eyes Mongoloid in appearance. The same source gives some descriptions of the ET feet. The SOM1-01 manual lists one entity known as an EBE type II. The hands have three tapering digits and a long thumb; the feet have four toes that are joined together with a membrane. When Colonel Corso was stationed at Ft. Riley, Kansas, he said that the alien he saw had thin legs and feet. While I was doing medical research on foot growth, I learned of a condition known as syndactyly, a condition in which two or more toes are held together with a skin membrane. The condition is rarely a problem, and surgical separation of the toes is usually unnecessary. A slightly different description of something similar is given by Stringfield's doctor, mentioned earlier. He said that the foot he saw was covered with skin somewhat reminiscent of a sock. However, an x-ray showed normal bone structure. I was intrigued by another of Stringfield's sources who examined two humanoids over seven feet tall (Status Report III, p. 29). These were described as having very small toes and very flat feet. The shoe soles I found in the arroyo, had no sign of an arch supports. The larger sole does not appear to have had much of a heel, a fact which could exclude an arch, but not enough of the upper material was found to make this determination. Modern shoes with arches, especially in ladies' high heels, have a metal spring-like shank embedded above the outsole, but there was no indication of this in either shoe.

In the end, I was able to match the small shoe sole with the length of a known foot, but not the corresponding width. With the larger shoe sole we were able to get heel and mid-sole measurements only, because the front was broken off. Despite consulting knowledgeable individuals in the shoe industry, I was unable to locate any corresponding sizes or manufacturers lasts of that size used in shoe production. Some of the components of both lengths, however, were very similar to children's sizes. The small sole length was for a one to two-year-old infant, and the larger sole, it is believed, would fit a foot no longer than an adolescent. One podiatrist commented on the extremely narrow width of the small shoe sole. "The shoe widths are off." Neither one would fit the bone structure of a foot of these lengths.

I am not satisfied that the shoe soles were a part of any UFO crash, but I am not absolutely sure they were not. Would the large and small soles, and shoes they were a part of, accommodate small narrow four-digit feet in their length and breadth, as mentioned in the SOM1-01 manual? Are the soles a part of some debris from a UFO crash? It is anybody's guess.

UFO Down-Under Vol.1

Genuine UFO Footage From Australia by Australian UFO Researcher Barry Taylor.

"I am pleased to be able to offer you my first video release containing the best U.F.O. footage I have taken between 1996-1999." Barry Taylor

"See my unique video footage of the "Jellyfish UFO". This is a World first piece of UFO footage. PLUS June 1999 50 minute daytime UFO sighting of multiple UFO objects. This UFO video contains 48 minutes of unusual, and most amazing genuine UFO footage ever seen. Featured in the video.

"Jellyfish UFO"

This 8 minute daytime sighting of a most unusual object (UFO) that had a appendage dangling from underneath. The object appeared to be 'swimming' because of its unusual movement and using this 'tail' to propel itself. As the object gets further away you can clearly see it pulsing. Zoomed close-ups of the object show the 'tail' action and a strange "Black Eye".

"Cluster" UFO's

"The best Video footage ever taken of "Cluster" UFO's".

Five different "clusters" are featured, including zooms showing their unusual rolling action around one another. This 50 minute daytime sighting also includes orange and spectrum blue UFO objects. When these objects flew in front of cloud you can see the upright cylinder shape of the object. These are also zoomed so that you can get a better look at their shape.

Lost Realms - Zecharia Sitchin

Zecharia Sitchin is the author of THE EARTH CHRONICLES series of books. Now you can join this amazing scholar of ancient languages as he makes a scientific and scholarly argument for ancient E.T. visits to our Earth. Sitchin was born in Russia, was raised in Palestine, graduated from the University of London with a degree in economic history. He worked for years as a journalist and editor in Israel before settling in New York. Sitchin, like Velikovsky and Däniken, presents a compelling and entertaining story based on belief about ancient visitors from other worlds. Zecharia Sitchin's key ideas are based on the assumption that ancient myths are not myths but historical and scientific texts. According to Sitchin, ancient Sumerian clay tablets reveal that gods from another planet (Nibiru, which orbits our Sun every 3,600 years) arrived on Earth some 450,000 years ago. Length: 120 Min DVD-R $9.95

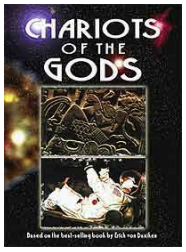
IN SEARCH OF ANCIENT ASTRONAUTS

This documentary narrated by Rod Serling, investigates the theory that extraterrestrials inhabited the Earth thousands of years ago, during the time of early humans. The program contains interviews with paranormal experts and historians, who talk about the conditions of the Earth during these ancient times and the types of interplanetary life that could have survived on the planet. The program also explores how the prehistoric human beings would have interacted with these aliens from other planets. 103 mins, DVD-R $9.95

UFOs THE FIRST ENCOUNTERS - A&E

A&E's Ancient Mysteries narrated by Leonard Nimoy, modern archaeologists investigate the strange phenomenon of UFOs by delving into the past as far back as the stone age. Many ancient civilizations erected monuments to the heavens with precision bordering on technological genius and often refer in their writings to bizarre flying objects seen in the sky. How were these civilizations so advanced that their technology is still unmatched in our contemporary society, and how are we to interpret these ancient references that share a startling similarity to UFOs being spotted today? Raising questions about the existence of UFOs, the identity of their occupants, and their possible influence on the history of mankind, this documentary examines clues from ancient civilizations that believed their societies originated with beings from above. $24.95



CHARIOTS OF THE GODS

"Fifty million stars in our galaxy have the potential of supporting life forms capable of traveling to other planets," says world-renowned authority Erich von Daniken, whose film version of his best-selling book, CHARIOTS OF THE GODS, gives stunning visual proof that some form of life from outer space landed on Earth centuries ago. It took five years for von Daniken to document, on film, the physical evidence of visits by galactic travelers who came to Earth. Just what they did here and the influences they left behind is the core of the film. In search of basic truths, the film, CHARIOTS OF THE GODS, takes the viewer into the far reaches of underground caves and tombs, and to the tops of desolate mountains on every major continent to show the evidence von Daniken has been collecting. Although this controversial film may provide the answers to age old mysteries, it may be the beginning of an entirely new set of questions.

FIRE IN THE SKY

One of the most famous real-life UFO abduction cases on record becomes this character-driven drama from sci-fi screenwriter Tracy Torme. D.B. Sweeney stars as Travis Walton, a forestry worker who disappears one night during an encounter with a flying saucer. Authorities treat with skepticism the outrageous story related by the only witnesses to the event, Travis' five co-workers, who include his best friend and future brother-in-law, Mike Rogers (Robert Patrick). A state lawman (James Garner) finds a tabloid newspaper in the crew's pickup truck and quickly ascertains that tensions had arisen between Walton and a surly fellow logger (Craig Sheffer), leading him to conclude that a murder cover-up is underway. However, all of the men pass lie detector tests and the case becomes stalled until the shocking last-minute reappearance of Travis, who tells a literally fantastic story involving his whereabouts for the past week. Starring: D.B. Sweeney, James Garner $19.95

COSMIC CONNECTION SHOW - Six shows on One DVD!

From The Archives of Cosmic Connection Television Show, The Longest Running Cable Access UFO show.
DAVID JACOBS, Ph.D. After fifty years of controversy over UFOs and alien abductions, distinguished historian and world reowned scholar of Temple university presents the first evidence-based explanation of the mystery that has perplexed scientists for decades. His shocking book The Threat, reveals why the aliens are here and why they have kept their agenda secret.What the aliens really want and how they plan to get it.

WHITLEY STRIEBER Author of the block buster book Communion that brought the whole abduction phenomenon to light. In Cosmic Connections' interview and video lecture of Mr Striebers' book Secret School. Also what makes this program special is the discussion of Whitleys uncle concerning Roswell New Mexico.

MICHAEL LINDEMANN Author of " Ufo and the Alien Presence Six View Points Of a UFO Investigator" Cosmic Connection Interview covers Roswell Alien Autopsy Film, the New Walt Disney attraction "ALIEN ENCOUNTERS" Cattle mutilations, the S 4 model from Area-51 and Project Redlight. Mr. Lindemann speaks of Lawrence Rockefeller, Robert Bigalow, Dolphin Research and Michaels' term Meta Lever.

ROBERT DEAN Retired Command Sergeant Major Robert O. Dean tells a story that skillfully presents an astonishing and convincing message: that we are not alone on this planet and never have been. Propelled upon a quest to share his discovery of a highly classified document he came upon during his military career, he has continued his agenda to inform the public about extraterrestrial life and our government's connection. One of the few holders of first-hand knowledge about government involvement with alien life, Mr. Dean recounts the contents of the 1964 report called "an Assessment," the NATO military study that acknowledged and analyzed the implications of the alien presence here on Earth.

BETTY HILL One of the first people to claim to of been abducted by Aliens, apart from the famous 'contactees' of the 40s and 50s, was actually a couple.(This is most unusual as most abductions tend to be of one person). The couple were Betty and Barney Hill. During September 1961 they were driving back from a holiday in Canada through the White Mountains. In this interview Mrs. Hill relates of her abduction, other contactees N.I.C.A.P., Dr. Benjamin Simon, craft description, the leader and the 11 aliens on board, the star map/Marjorie Fish and the loveable Mr. Phillip Klass.

In the duration of thirty years, between 1948 and 1978, there were 63,144 reported UFO sightings. As UFOs: Above and Beyond points out, that equates to four sightings an hour, every hour of the day, every day of the year, for thirty years! An astonishing photographic account narrated by the late James Doohan (best known for his role as Star Trek's 'Scotty'), this documentary utilizes photos, film clips, government documents, and expert testimony to explore the possibility of alien existence. Though photos and home videos of unidentified flying objects are often dismissed as hoaxes, the images used in this film have been studied by independent labs and deemed unaltered and thus, authentic. Other evidence examined in UFOs: Above and Beyond includes the existence of cave paintings depicting aliens and alien craft dating back to ancient times as, well as early church frescoes of similar images. Discussion of the UFO crash in Roswell, New Mexico, is another film highlight along with clips of an intriguing interview with Bob Lazar, a nuclear physicist who worked near Area-51 at a top-secret site where he studied the propulsion mechanisms of an alien aircraft. Captivating, probing, and informational, this eye-opening film poses the question, "Are we really alone?" Watch and decide for yourself. Region One. 55 mins DVD Region One $9.95

Based on the best-selling novel by Whitley Strieber, "Communion" features what is considered by many to be Christopher Walken's finest performance to date. "Communion" depicts the personal and professional crises a writer experiences after a series of encounters with non-human beings. This film is arguably the most intelligent film about the alien abduction/visitor phenomenon. Unlike countless made-for-TV films, where the emphasis is on the sensationalistic, "shocking" aspects of the subject, "Communion" focuses on the psychological and emotional harm the experience does. We see Strieber (Walken) describe his experiences to his medical doctor, and then to a psychiatrist. Once his own mental health has been established, then (and only then) does he begin to consider the possibility that the creatures he has seen are actually real. Features theme music performed by Eric Clapton! Starring: Christopher Walken, Lindsay Crouse. DVD $18.95

PROJECT REDSTAR MARTIAN GENESIS

One of the most astounding and incredible videos you will ever see - for it is history in the making. This video offers INCONTROVERTIBLE EVIDENCE of an extraterrestrial base on Mars. This is volume one in a series of three, that probes the depths of the greatest mystery ever to confront the human race. Who built these structures? Why are they so much like those found on Earth in both scale and shape? Why do we have such a mixture of structures, like those found in the Middle East, India, Mexico, South America and Egypt? What are the high technology structures that are clearly seen there as well? More questions are raised than can be answered in a two hour video, which is why VOLUME ONE concentrates on the structures, and offers a deep probe into each of the obvious buildings at this incredible archeological site. Complete with the actual photographs, ink lifts, artist renditions, computer renditions and animations, you will take an astounding tour by air over Tithonia City. This video release is the PROOF POSITIVE that we are NOT ALONE, and that there is an EARTH-MARS CONNECTION. $29.95

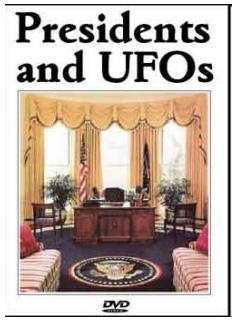
Mystery of the Maya - DVD

It's hard to believe that while the European continent was entrenched in the horrors of the Dark Ages, the Mayan culture was thriving. Not only did the Mayans create a complicated written language, they had far exceeded the Europeans in their study and mapping of the stars and planets, mathematics, and architecture. What happened to the Mayan people? How did they come to be? Why was this isolated culture so advanced? These questions and many others are explored in The Mystery of Maya. Originally shot in the IMAX format, this film was intended to make the viewer feel as if they were actually creeping through the jungles of Mexico and Guatemala until finally coming upon the great Mayan ruins. Directors Brian Howells and Robert Rochin Naya take their cameras and crew to several of the major Mayan ruin sites to investigate and see what clues and insights can be found. Actress Susan Glover narrates this adventure documentary, giving needed commentary on the locales and practical purposes of the structures that are seen. $14.95 DVD



Presidents and UFOs

An amazing conversation with Grant Cameron. Grant became involved in Ufology in May 1975 with personal sightings of an object which locally became known as Charlie Red Star. The sightings occurred in Carman, Manitoba about 25 miles north of the Canada-US border. Hundreds of other people sighted objects at the same time during a prolonged flap of sightings. In the past few years Cameron has turned his research interests to the involvement and actions of the President of the United States and UFOs. He has made over twenty trips to the National Archives and most of the various Presidential libraries and archives looking for UFO material. One highlight of his presidential UFO research was the chance to question Vice-president Dick Cheney on his knowledge of the UFO subject. Another highlight of the presidential UFO research was a FOIA to the White House Office of Science and Technology which yielded 1,000 pages of UFO documents from the Clinton administration. Here's the dvd presentation from the renowned author, newspaper & magazine reporter and investigator Ivan Sanderson's 1953 audio report (during a radio interview in New York) of what he discovered only 1 year earlier in 1952. The Braxton County (West Virginia) incident is world famous and continues to be evaluated with the top UFO investigators. Considered one of the world's most unusual happenings, the UFO (sometimes referred to the Braxton County Monster and not to be confused with that other famous West Virginia monster, The Mothman") was seen by at least 14 people. Hear Ivan Sanderson talk about what the kids saw... and how they (and a dog) reacted. The date was September 12, 1952. What the boys saw was described as a "shooting star" that fell to earth on the top of the hill adjacent to the playground. About the length of a football field away, they all saw an object that was glowing and hissing. Walking closer to check out the "star", they noted that it was about 10 feet around. A few feet away from this glowing object they saw two lights, much like the glow of flashlights, about 12 inches apart. One of the boys had a flashlight and when he turned it on the object a huge creature with "...a bright red face, bright green clothing, a head which resembled the ace of spades, and clothing which, from the waist down, hung in great folds" was seen. Newspapers sent special reporters to cover the story.

Many investigators also came and took soil samples. One well known scientist, Ivan Sanderson, and his assistant, Eddie Schoenenberger, came from New York City. With all the attention given to this sighting, one would think that a report would have been definite. However, it was never revealed what was found from the scientific tests and the investigation. The audio for it's age is very clear with just a couple of small glitches. The audio is about 35 minutes long and will thrill UFO and paranormal buffs everywhere.35 mins, DVD-R DVD-R $14.95

UFO - True Story of Flying Saucers

Is something really out there? Do aliens live among us? For newspaperman Albert M. Chop, the very idea that flying saucers might actually exist is "pure, unadulterated bunk!" But when he became directly involved in "Project Bluebook," the pentagon's official designation for top-secret UFO investigations, Chop's skepticism begins to fade! And after viewing authentic Air Force footage of the "Unknowns" over Utah and Montana, and eye-witnessing radar contact with UFOs hovering over Washington D.C., Chop becomes convinced that the evidence of interplanetary craft is undeniable. This documentary style feature includes a re-creation of the famous Philip Mantel Sighting and crash with the actual tower personnel.

MYSTERIOUS MONSTER

"The Mysterious Monsters", is a fantastic movie! It tells the story of the phenomenon known as BIGFOOT. From the beginning of the phenomenon to the current day (As of 1975) history, this documentary movie covers all of the bases! It uses eyewitness evidence, video evidence, film evidence, footprint evidence, as well as alot of other investigative techniques, to establish that our planet is in fact home to these elusive creatures. It asks the question, "If fingerprint evidence can be used to hang someone,why can't footprint evidence be used to prove the existence of someone?" And the evidence does in fact prove that these creatures are real. This is a very interesting movie, and if and when the day comes that Bigfoot and the Loch Ness monster, who is also discussed in this movie, are proven beyond ANY doubt, this movie will make the headlines for being way ahead of it's time! It is a crime that this movie isn't available on video or DVD. It deserves to be! Check it out. 86 minutes, DVD-R $14.95

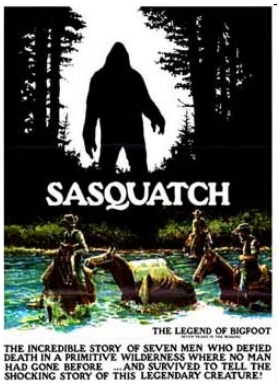
OVERLORDS OF THE UFOS

This rare dvd profiles the real life abductions of people by extra-terrestrials through the use of photographic evidence. (allmovie.com) I saw this movie while in college in 1975. I laughed until I cried. I was in pain. I rolled on the floor in agony. You actually get to see photographs of " Invisible Flying Critters ". Plan 9 from Outer Space and Robot Monster have good production values when compared to this movie. The narrator talked about a 4 engine bomber that encountered a UFO but the film shows a 2 engined C-47 military transport. The saucers are tin pie plates dangling from fishing line attached to fishing poles! The guys who made this had a lot of fun. See it with friends as this heightens the effect of the absurdity and creates a bootstrap laughing situation. However you must be careful if food or drink is made part of the experience since choking and projectile fluids could be a problem. Someone should check out credentials of who made this movie. Was their a sinister motive like CIA disinformation or just an attempt to slay the audience with peals of laughter? Wonder if it came in under budget. Did it have a budget? A classic of its kind! 92 mins DVD-R $14.95



SASQUATCH
THE LEGEND OF BIGFOOT
THE INCREDIBLE STORY OF SEVEN MEN WHO DEFIED DEATH IN A PRIMITIVE WILDERNESS WHERE NO MAN HAD GONE BEFORE ...AND SURVIVED TO TELL THE SHOCKING STORY OF THIS LEGENDARY CREATURE!

LEGEND OD SASQUATCH

The ultra-rare SASQUATCH (1978) has been a "hard to find" item for going on two decades. Long out-of-print after a spotty home video release almost 20 years ago, it has remained almost as elusive as its Pacific Northwestern namesake, which may be fitting in some strange, symbolic manner: until now, you've had to hunt to catch even glimpses of it. Shot against the rugged natural backdrop of Oregon that gives it a Disney nature film feel, SASQUATCH is a docudrama detailing various savage bigfoot encounters throughout history, including a recreation of one recited by Teddy Roosevelt in a published journal!

And unlike 90% of other movie portrayals, here the monster is truly that, attacking without provocation, ripping out a hunter's throat, terrorizing miners, and more, all of which may upset the more "P.C." image of the mythic skunk ape as Godzilla-like protector of the redwoods. Here, Sasquatch is more likely to break your neck just for the sick thrill of hearing the 'crack!'

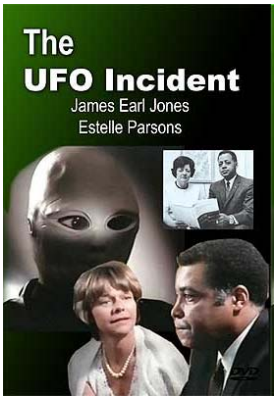
ALTERNATIVE 3

Alternative 3 was the final documentary aired by the well respected Science Report series on UK's Anglia TV on 4/1/77. Less than an hour after the broadcast the television station issued a hurried statement claiming that the show was a hoax. But was it? Did Astronauts land on Mars in 1964? Have we been sending Scientists to Mars for over thirty years? Is everything you know about NASA and the U.S. space program just a big lie? Watch and decide. DVD-R $14.95



THE UFO INCIDENT

The UFO Incident is a TV movie based on the true-life story of Betty and Barney Hill, the biracial married couple whose alleged abduction by extraterrestrials made headlines. The film is careful not to present the Hills' reminiscences as cold facts; both "remember" the ordeal only when probed under hypnosis by doctor Barnard Hughes. The alien abduction is presented in flashback form, adhering strictly to the Hills' description of the space vessel and crew. Essentially a dual monologue, The UFO Incident is kept alive by the virtuoso performances of stars James Earl Jones and Estelle Parsons. Particularly compelling is the fact that Jones' character resists the memory of his experience because he is afraid of suffering a fatal heart attack--which, we are informed in the epilogue, was indeed the ultimate fate of Barney Hill.Cast: Beeson Carroll, Barnard Hughes, James Earl Jones, Dick O'Neill, Estelle Parsons Running Time: 100 Minutes DVD-R $14.95

NOW AFTER 30 YEARS OF GOV'T AND MILITARY COVERUP ... THE TRUTH IS REVEALED FOR THE FIRST TIME !
UFO'S ARE REAL
A Brandon Chase Film

UFOs ARE REAL

Simply put, this is the greatest UFO documentary ever made.

This documentary is done from the point of view of pure objective science. It explains what UFO's really are, why the Extraterrestrial Hypothesis is the best explanation for the best UFO cases, and it explains it in language that anyone can understand.

If after seeing this you do not accept that some UFO's are the spacecraft of beings from other planets after seeing this documentary, then YOU are the one with the problem; the problem of denial in the face of irrefutable evidence and unassailable logic.

This film is the origin of many of the stills with white captions you see all over the internets; its influence has been profound and widespread. It is the first UFO documentary everyone needs to see and it is the only one you need to show to anyone if you want to change their minds about UFO's. It is the documentary against which all other UFO documentaries should be measured. DVD-R$14.95
